

NATION PAYS TRIBUTE TO HERO DEAD

LINDBERGH ARRIVES SAFELY IN LONDON THOUSANDS ATTEND ARLINGTON PROGRAM

FLYER RISES EARLY TO PRESERVE PLANE FROM ADMIRING MOB

Hero Barely Escapes Crashing When Ship Is Landed

LONDON, May 30.—Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh's solicitude for his airplane—"The Spirit of St. Louis"—which barely escaped being crushed upon landing at Croydon aerodrome at 6:07 yesterday evening by the rush of scores of thousands of hero worshipers, brought him out of bed at 7 o'clock this morning.

While American Ambassador A. B. Houghton and most of the members of the embassy staff were still sleeping Lindbergh was up and dressed and on his way to the flying field.

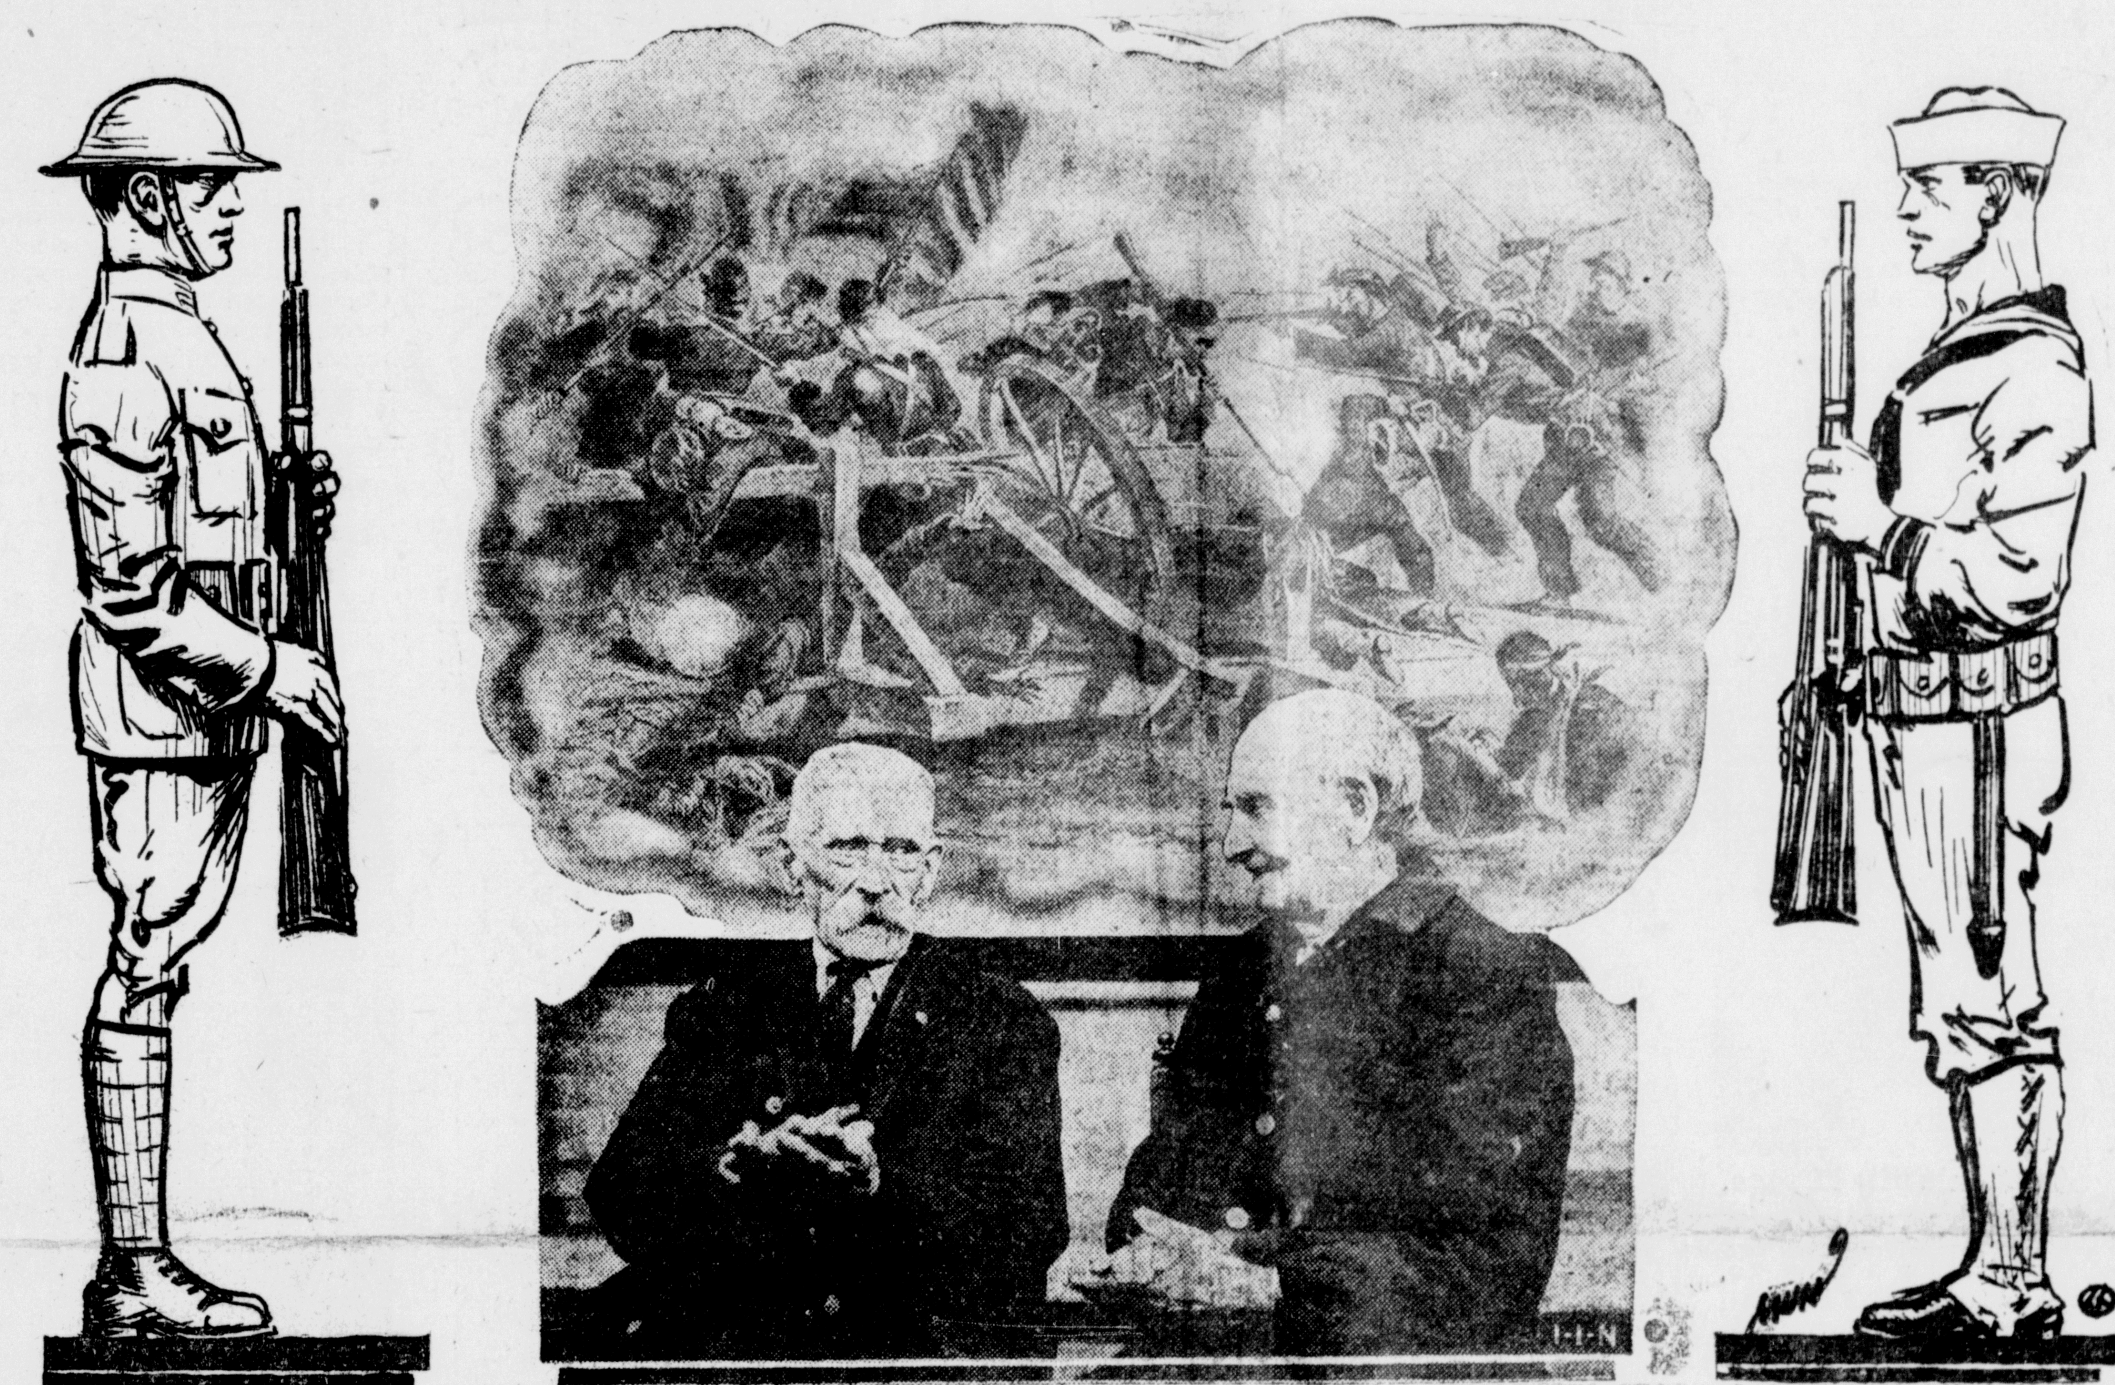

Ambassador Houghton's personal valet was on hand and offered to assist Capt. Lindbergh in dressing but the young aviator smilingly declined. He was soon enroute to the flying field.

Lindbergh expressed a desire to fly back to the United States, rather than return aboard the warship which President Coolidge has tendered him, and which he terms as "too slow."

Speaking to newspaper men at the American embassy, Lindbergh said he would like to investigate a more southerly route across the Atlantic than the one he followed in his historic flight. He said he believed the southern route might offer better possibilities for a regular commercial air line than his route of the most direct line from Newfoundland to Ireland, because if necessary, the journey could be broken at the Azores on the southern route.

Lindbergh said he would like to investigate the southern route with commercial possibilities specifically in mind.

MEMORIAL DAY

Capital Leads Country In Annual Observance—President Delivers Address At National Cemetery

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The capital led the nation today in paying reverential tribute to the thousands who have given their lives in its defense.

The great national cemetery at Arlington, where the white headstones march in endless ranks over the green Virginia hillside, was the mecca of thousands of visitors. There was scarcely a stone but bore its burden of bright colored flowers, and tiny flags.

President Coolidge went to the beautiful white amphitheatre soon after the noon hour to speak his tribute to the nation's defenders. At the same time, and throughout the day, there were memorial services in the churches all over the city.

The tomb of Admiral George Dewey, hero of the Spanish war, at Mt. St. Albans was especially decorated, as was that of the late war president, Woodrow Wilson nearby.

Countless wreaths were placed on the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington, where special memorial services were held before the president spoke.

Veterans' organizations held memorial services throughout the city.

WEATHER MENACING NATIONAL BALLOON RACE BEFORE START

Low Pressure Areas May Mean Hazardous Air Trip

AKRON, O., May 30.—With low pressure disturbances reported approaching Ohio from the west, a short-distance contest was forecast today in the national balloon race, scheduled to start from the Cleveland-Akron speedway here at 4:30 p. m.

Although clear skies and comparatively calm air currents greeted early test officers, who took the air to ascertain atmospheric conditions, it was being predicted that approaching low pressure "spots" might make this the most hazardous balloon race in years. That dreaded foe of all balloonists—lightning—may accompany the reported low pressure area, making it doubly dangerous for the pilots and aides who occupy the baskets underneath the huge gas-filled bags.

After a study of official weather forecasts and latest telegraphic reports, it was deemed best to call a consultation at ten o'clock this morning, which was to be attended by all pilots and officers concerned, for the purpose of discussing the situation.

In the meantime, work of laying out the great envelopes was proceeding. Each basket was to be provided with two-day food rations, and the customary emergency ration. Radio sets were to be installed to enable the contestants to receive regular weather reports from the country's high powered radio stations.

The three bags covering the greatest distance, remaining unimpeded, will win the privilege of representing the United States in the International Balloon Races starting from Denver next September.

The balloon traversing the greatest distance will win the Litchfield trophy, now held by the Akron chapter, N. A. A., as the result of Pilot Wade Van Orman's last victory won while representing the Goodyear Company. Van Orman is on the job for the same concern today.

While the bags were being inflated this morning, the 1927 airplane contest, sponsored by the Akron-Beacon Journal, was to be held from the horse race tracks adjoining the speedway.

An airplane review was scheduled to start at 1:30 p. m. featured by a triple parachute leap from a Martin bomber. Included on the plane review program was a pursuit plane race, in which Selfridge field pilots, flying the world's swiftest combat machines were to compete. Mimic warfare was also listed on the plane program.

ROMAN SHEET FIRST PAPER IN WORLD

COLUMBUS, O., May 30.—The "Acta Diurna" of Rome, published in 60 B. C., is accredited as being the first newspaper in the world by the May edition of the Ohio Newspaper, published by the Department of Journalism at Ohio State University.

The Ohio publication claims that the Rome newspaper was in the form of a bulletin post in the most frequented spot in Rome. It told of the daily acts and decisions of the senators.

According to the Ohio Newspaper, however, the first conveyers of news in history were made on clay tablets long before Caesar was heralded as leader of the Romans. Some of the tablets are known to have been inscribed as far back as 6,000 B. C.

The "news letters" followed the Roman lead. The last named were written letters relating to all the news of the day. In 1457, the first printed news letter, the "Nuremberg Gazette," appeared. The first real newspaper in the English language was published in Amsterdam in 1620, the year when the Pilgrims migrated from the old country to America. Two years later, the "London Weekly News" appeared as the first newspaper printed in London.

THIRTY THREE CARS ENTERED IN ANNUAL AUTOMOBILE RACES

Millers Predominate Among Types In 500 Mile Classic

INDIANAPOLIS, May 30.—Thirty-three cars, the limit under racing rules and regulations, at the stroke of ten this morning, began the 500-mile grind that is the 15th annual international speedway championship event.

Of these thirty-three, sixteen are Miller creations, with the usual smattering of Dusenbergs, four Cooper specials, and three Boyle valve specials. Ten of the cars are front drive affairs, but the one, a Miller special that will be raced by Frank Lockhart, last year's winner, is a rear drive.

Lockhart, by virtue of his 120 miles an hour pace during trials last Thursday, has the pole position in the lineup of three abreast, across the track. His partners in the first row are Peter DePalma, whose 101.13 miles per hour average in 1925 stands as the record, and Leon Durray. All three are Miller special drivers.

Harry Hartz, for the first time in his six years of competition in the 500-mile drive, failed to get in the first row. He is in the second lineup, with him are Ralph Hepburn, and Cliff Woodbury, the latter two driving Boyle valve specials.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the return to racing of Tommy Milton, who qualified a Detroit special, when the original pilot, Cliff Durant was taken ill. Milton is the only driver who has ever won two of the past fourteen classics.

For centuries civilized people have tenaciously and heroically struggled, not merely for political freedom, but for the widest diffusion of human happiness, and at the moment when they had reason to believe that this long effort was being crowned with success, they are met with a new experiment in government, in the name of the people, which, thus far, seems to the world in general more tyrannical and oppressing than any preceding despotism. That the masters of this new regime profess to speak in a great people's name deceives nobody and need not be taken into consideration.

The mangled bodies of the six young men were found in the roadside by Miss Eva Moreau, a trained nurse, who chanced to be passing in another automobile. She rendered aid and saved the lives of Foughner and Richards.

The dying: Anthony Cormier, 21. The seriously hurt: Anthony Foughner, 21, and Edgar Richards, 21.

AMBASSADOR HERRICK ATTACKS BOLSHEVISM IN MEMORIAL TALK

Compares Russian Political Move To "Loathsome Malady"—Says Russia Example Of Moral Debacle

PARIS, May 30.—The American ambassador, Myron T. Herrick, in a Memorial Day speech at the American Military Cemetery at Suresnes today, vigorously attacked the "scourge of bolshevism," which he characterized as a political disease.

"We intend to protect our country as vigorously from bolshevism as our ancestors defended it against tyranny," he declared, "and the fact that a government secretly sends against us the germs of a loathsome malady instead of openly dispatching armies, does not make the invasion less felonious or alter our duty to repel it."

"The brave men who lie in these graves, by the sacrifice of their precious lives, helped to save their country from a conquering despotism; then let us here resolve that it shall not now be rotted by a deliberately spread disease."

"We have no thought of attacking the Soviet regime in Russia; what it does on its own 'reservation' is its own affair. But we do object, with all the earnestness of a self-respecting nation, and quite regardless of material considerations, to giving to its leaders the means and opportunity for poisoning us."

Ambassador Herrick made a plea for peace and declared that the problem of war, its causes, its possible recurrence and the likelihood of curbing it, have never been studied so earnestly as now.

"If the enthusiasm over the prospect of enforcing peace which prevailed ten years ago has somewhat diminished," he said, "the determination to get at the bottom of the question has not, and the investigation goes on the noblest spirit as evidenced by M. Briand's peace proposal of April 6 to outlaw war."

"Modern methods of scientific research are being applied to the scourge of war just as they are applied to the scourge of cancer and all this in itself is a helpful sign. The twentieth century can best work with twentieth century tools, whether the effort be directed toward increasing the sum of human enjoyment or toward diminishing man's inherited instincts for violence and conflict."

"I believe that the people in every country must choose between order and anarchy, between honesty and thievery, between every-day virtue and crime," he continued. "Either we believe in orderly society or we don't; if we do we ought to use all the power within us to defend and advance it. The impudent, mischievous interference

REMEMBRANCE

"THE muffled drum's sad roll has beat
The soldier's last tattoo;
No more on Life's parade shall meet
The brave and fallen few.
On Fame's eternal camping-ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And Glory guards, with solemn round
The bivouac of the dead."
—Theodore O'Hara.

COMPETITIVE WAGE SCALE IS NO CURE FOR COAL INDUSTRY ILLS

BELLAIRE, O., May 30.—The proposed competitive wage scale is no cure for the ills of the Ohio coal industry according to Leo Hall president of the Ohio miners. He declared that a reduction in wages for Ohio miners would be met by a similar reduction in the non union fields and that when wages had been lowered until another reduction is no longer possible, longer hours would result. Hall informed newspapermen that he was willing to debate the question with any of the operators or representative at any time and any place.

The rank and file of the miners is standing firm in its demand for the Jacksonville scale said Hall. Questioned about the operation of the two Pittsburgh coal company mines in the Pomeroy field he admitted that about 500 men were working producing about one half of the normal output of the mines.

Hall explained that the company stores in the non union field and at Pomeroy had proved to be a boomerang for the business men who advocated the reduction in wages and resumption of the mines.

CROWD OF 50,000 ATTEND FIELD MASS

CINCINNATI, O., May 30.—A crowd estimated at 50,000 stood with bared heads under the heat of a terrific sun here yesterday, at St. Xavier college, in an open air amphitheatre, listening to a pontifical high mass, participated in by a choir of 11,000 children's voices in what was pronounced the greatest religious demonstration ever held in Ohio. The Rt. Rev. Francis J. Beckman, bishop of Lincoln, Nebraska, and president of the National Catholic Students Mission Crusade, under whose auspices the demonstration was held, celebrated the mass.

Three hundred persons, including many of the child singers, fainted from the heat and press of the throng, but no serious results were reported.

Among the extraordinary small number of Americans to be presented to King George and Queen Mary of England at this year's court is Florence Lowden, daughter of Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois.

FOUR AVIATORS DIE WHEN HUGE BOMBER CRASHES TO GROUND

Motor Goes Dead—Plane Thrown Into Nose Dive

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 30.—Four aviators of the United States army squadron en route from San Antonio to Langley Field, Virginia, were burned to death yesterday when the left motor of their airplane went dead 600 feet above the flying field.

The plane fell to the ground in flames. The dead are: Second Lieutenant Dan F. Voorhees, air corps service, pilot of the plane.

Staff Sergeant Clifford Glenn, Fifty-ninth service squadron. Staff Sergeant James Read, Twentieth bombardment squadron.

Corporal Melvin Andrews, Fifty-ninth service squadron. The plane, one of the fourteen modern bombers that had participated in the maneuvers at San Antonio, had ascended 500 feet to wait for the other planes to take off when the motor went dead, throwing the plane into a nose dive.

It was in flames when the machine struck the ground and comrades were unable to go to the rescue of the occupants. When they finally succeeded in extricating the bodies they had been almost incinerated.

Several thousand persons saw the accident. They had gathered early this morning at the flying field to witness the take-off of the bombers that had stopped here Friday on their way back to Langley Field.

IDENTIFY "PURPLE STREAK" BANDIT

ELYRIA, O., May 30.—The bandit who was killed in a battle with police here after holding up an Elyria store, has been identified by relatives as Irwin Short, of Port Clinton, Ohio, wanted at Elmore for burglary of a bank, and in Toledo for auto theft. Two of the victims of the "purple cap" bandit who spread terror in northwestern Ohio several weeks ago by a series of robberies and holdups have also identified Short as the man who robbed them, officers said.

The condition of Police Chief E. J. Stankard, seriously wounded by the bandit in the gun battle here, is improving, and hopes were entertained for his recovery.

WILE SAYS:

Farm Loan Policy Fight Expected Mellon Is Target Washington Notes

By FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927

WASHINGTON, May 30.—President Coolidge has no sooner signaled his intention to spend the summer in the heart of the farming west than there comes from that region a warning that the administration's agricultural credits policy is to be subjected in the next Congress to furious attack. The same groups which demanded McNary-Haugen farm-relief legislation are preparing to assail, hip and thigh, the recent re-organization of the Federal Farm Loan Board.

The appointments of Eugene Meyer, Jr., as head of the board, and Floyd R. Harrison and George R. Cooke as members of the board, are to be the targets at which the farm opposition will shoot. Messrs. Meyer, Harrison and Cooke having been transferred bodily from the directorate of the War Finance Corporation, leaders of agricultural organizations are charging that the federal farm credits system has now come under the "domination" of Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury. Dating from the time Mr. Mellon publicly assailed McNary-Haugenism, he has ranked as one of the chief aversions of the farm politicians.

According to plans now under discussion among agricultural leaders, and freely commented upon in their official publications, hostilities at Washington will open when the president submits the appointment of Messrs. Meyer, Harrison and Cooke to the senate for confirmation. These new farm loan board members supersede Edward E. Jones, of Pennsylvania; Robert A. Cooper, of South Carolina, and Elmer S. Landes, of Ohio.

One of the foremost farm editors in the country has just said

Travel Trouble

RIPON, Wis., May 30.—Miss Gertrude Moore, pretty senior co-ed at Ripon college, received, as a graduation present from her father, a sight-seeing trip around the world.

Expecting something of a change from the studios college life in the quiet college town of Ripon, Wis., Miss Moore found rather more than she sought. From the very outset a Jinx appeared to follow her voyage.

Arriving in Japan, the land of cherry blossoms, soft-voiced geisha girls, and beautiful scenery, she expected to find, as Kipling might put it, a land of "rather more than oriental splendor." Instead, she found herself in the midst of the death and destruction occasioned by the great earthquake at Kobe, when more than 3,000 people were killed, scores of thousands injured, and the funny little Japanese houses leveled throughout the center of the empire as though by some gigantic scythe.

Undaunted by her experience in Japan, Miss Moore proceeded to Shanghai, famed since long forgotten days as the pearl of the Orient, the gateway city of the east. There at least she might expect to find sights worthy of the long journey and eastern romance to repay her for her misfortunes in Japan.

Jinx Still Active.

Quite on the contrary, she discovered that her Jinx was still in hot pursuit. Where she had looked for so scented tea rooms with almond-eyed girls in kawy-hued silken trousers to attend her wants, and impassive yellow-skinned coolies to carry her baggage, were the soldiers of five great nations patrolling their beats behind barbed wire entanglements, grim muzzles of machine guns poking their ugly noses through embrasures, and stern native executioners parading the streets of the native settlement with huge drawn swords.

Business was at a standstill Monday, public and county offices, financial institutions and a majority of business houses being closed for a holiday, to pay tribute to the memory of the living and dead soldiers of all wars.

Sex Hypnosis Plea Saves in Gray Parallel

NEWTON, N. J. (U-I-N Special).—Sex hypnosis!

The same defense that saved Henry Judd Gray has saved the life of Frank Van Sickle.

Van Sickle, in a case remarkable for its similarity to the Snyder murder case, has won a sentence of life imprisonment on his plea that he murdered Edward Raser while under the same influence of Mrs. Sadie Raser that Gray was of Mrs. Ruth Snyder.

As Gray loved Mrs. Snyder, so did Van Sickle love Mrs. Raser. As Albert Snyder was found dead, so was Raser. He was shot to death as he walked across his farm in Sandyston township on September 28, 1925.

Van Sickle was brought to trial. Just as Gray admitted the crime, Van Sickle admitted his. His defense was identical with Gray's, that he was under the compelling influence of the woman in the case—sex hypnosis.

Gray, with Mrs. Snyder, was convicted in the first degree by an all-male jury and sentenced to be executed. Raser was tried alone. On the jury were five women, including Mrs. Ethel Dewey, foreman. Perhaps women are more ready to believe that they wield a hypnotic influence of men. The jury found Raser guilty—he had admitted everything, but recommended life imprisonment.

"Mrs. Raser said she wanted to get her husband out of the way and marry me. I refused at first but was under her spell," Van Sickle had told the jurors.

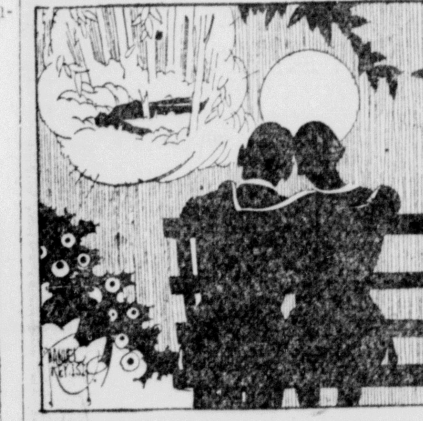

As a result of his testimony, New Jersey officials said they would move to bring Mrs. Raser to trial on a murder charge. She is already under charges of conspiracy and attempted poison.

The body of Edward Raser, country club keeper, was found shot to death in a field near Sandyston, N. J. Frank Van Sickle, an admirer of Mrs. Raser, admitted the crime.

Van Sickle's plea of "sex hypnosis" closely paralleled that of Henry Judd Gray, accused with Mrs. Ruth Snyder of murdering her husband. Van Sickle said Mrs. Raser wished to marry him.

Mrs. Isadore Middleton, 78, died at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Hazard, at Middleton's Corner, south-east of Xenia, Monday morning at 7 o'clock. She had been an invalid for five years, her condition becoming serious during the past two weeks, following a stroke of paralysis.

Mrs. Middleton was born June 3, 1849 in Richmond, Ind., and came to Middleton's Corner as a bride of eighteen years. She had spent the rest of her life there.

Her husband, B. J. Middleton, preceded her in death eight years last March. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Carrie E. Davis, near New Burlington and Mrs. Margaret Hazard, at home. Another daughter, Mrs. Laura Racer, died sixteen years ago. Three grandchildren and four great grandchildren, also survive. Mrs. Middleton was the last member of her immediate family.

Funeral services will be held at the home at Middleton's Corner, Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, with interment at Woodland Cemetery, Xenia.

BALLOON TROPHY AND DONOR

P. W. Litchfield and the cup he donated for National Balloon Competition

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1927

AKRON, O., May 30.—Any one of three racing teams which will represent this city in the 1927 national balloon race from the Akron-Cleveland speedway may bring the P. W. Litchfield trophy to a permanent berth in Akron.

When the Goodyear president offered the trophy in 1925 he specified that it should become the permanent property of any chapter of the National Aeronautic association whose representative should win the race three years in succession. For two consecutive years, 1925 and 1926, the trophy has been won by Akron balloonists and it is hoped that, with three chances, Akron aeronauts will achieve permanent possession.

The trophy, designed by Tiffany, is a thirty-inch-high loving cup, surmounted by a cover with a winged Pegasus on top. A silver panel on the pedestal displays a Zeppelin in full flight.

Carl K. Wollam and Ward T. Van Orman were the first winners of the trophy and brought it to Akron in 1925. Wollam will pilot the balloon "Beacon Journal" in this year's Memorial Day race, and will be accompanied by Howard Wolf, a newspaper man. In his first victory he flew 1,073 miles from San Antonio, Tex., to within a few miles of the Canadian border.

Van Orman, who accompanied Wollam in the following year, when he and W. W. Morton drifted 848 miles from Little Rock, Ark., to Petersburg, Va., and retained the cup for Akron. The same team will handle the Goodyear company's entry in this year's race.

Akron's third hope rests in Jack Boettner and J. F. Cooper in the "Scripps-Howard." Boettner was the winner last year in the Detroit News race.

"SICK-HEADACHES?"

Torturing, maddening! Most always trace them to a lazy liver, constipation and a sour-stomach. Poison of fermented foods retained, instead of passing, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissues, it causes congestion and that acute, sickening pain.

Blackburn's Casca-Royal Pills quickly and surely remove the cause by stimulating the liver, toning up the bowels, making the poison-ferments move on and out, thus purifying the blood and curing the headaches. The effect is almost instantaneous.

Women, because of their sensitive organism are especially prone to periodical headaches, should not suffer if a drugstore is nearby—for Blackburn's Casca-Royal Pills have helped millions during the past 25 years. Non-secret formula, small, sweet, prompt and "Better Than Castor Oil." Two sizes 15c-30c.

Rheumatism

Get this relief at once. German and American science has produced Su-thol Tablets which bring quick, safe, amazing benefits.

This is one of many who have been helped: "I certainly can recommend Su-thol Tablets for rheumatism, as I suffered for weeks before taking them. Had electric treatments for two months and finally got so bad was not able to walk at all. I took one box of Su-thol and my rheumatism was gone. Also took your Casca-Royal Pills to regulate the bowels. Have never felt so well in my life and I recommend your medicines to my friends. Truly yours, Mrs. Josephine Howard, 232 Blandina St., Ulica, N. Y."

The cost is trivial, the results assured. Six 25c tubes in each $1.00 package at leading drug stores.

Reserves Whitewash Osborn Cement Team 16 To 0

PAYTON BLANKS Foe ALLOWING BUT FIVE HITS IN AFTERNOON

Regan Pitches Well But Quits When Mates Betray Him

All teams look alike to the Xenia Reserves, the local nine running its winning streak to five straight by overwhelming the Osborn Miami Cements for the second time this season 16 to 0 in a slow Buckeye League set-to Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

"Rube" Payton pitched his second shut-out in two weeks, permitting but five hits and demonstrating particular effectiveness with runners on bases to overcome an unusual tendency to wildness. Reserves accumulated all of their runs in three innings, scoring twice in the sixth, eight in the seventh, and with same safely stowed away, came back to score six more times in the eighth.

Lee Regan, Xenia boy, on the hill for Osborn, pitched effectively for six innings, blanking the Reserves in the first five frames but voluntarily removed himself from the game in the seventh after three Osborn errors had resulted in two more runs.

Wilkinson, a youngster with nothing more than his nerve, took his place, and his rattled off Reserve hits with monotonous regularity, the home team punching out no less than thirteen hits off his delivery in the two innings he worked.

The game was a fairly good exhibition for six innings until Osborn blew up.

Payton worked himself out of at least three tight situations with great skill. Twice the Cements filled the bases and on another occasion had runners on first and second but could not score, and nine runners were left stranded on the bags.

Every member of the winning team hit safely at least once and each player also scored at least one run himself. Reserves amassed nineteen hits. Keifer leading with the willow with four hits including two doubles, in five swings. C. Scott obtained three hits and Durnbaugh, Tangeman, Cyphers, Rader and Payton each obtained two bingles. Carr was the only Osborn player to make two hits.

With the exception of an error by Rader, the Reserves fielded faultlessly and completed one double play. Osborn committed seven misplays behind the effective pitching of Regan, who should not have been scored upon during his stay in the box.

Reserves will probably have some opposition at last in the Memorial Day game with the Springfield Tramps, who will include four or five Central League players in their lineup. Cyphers will pitch the game with Hood working for the visitors. Reserves defeated the Tramps last year 3 to 2.

XENIA QUIT CLUB TO MEET EASTWOOD

Xenia Quoit Club will be trying for its first match victory of the season in the Miami Valley Quoit League match with the Eastwood Club on the Dayton courts Tuesday night. Arrangements will also probably be made this week to play the postponed match with the Shrine Club of Dayton. Rain forced cancellation of the match in Xenia last Monday night. All pitchers of the local club should report at the club grounds on E. Market St., at 7 o'clock, promptly, prior to leaving for Dayton.

POLICE AND XENIA RESERVES LEADING BUCKEYE LEAGUE

Dayton Police and Xenia Reserves preserved their records in the Buckeye League free from defeats by winning league games Sunday. Reserves again proved too much for the Osborn Miami Cements and Payton shut out the visitors 16 to 0, Osborn going to pieces defensively in the seventh inning. The Police had no end of trouble in defeating Harshmanville on the latter's diamond, by a score of 3 to 2. "Lefty" Leeper pitched for the winners and worked himself out of many desperate situations, holding the losers to four hits. Long hurled a nice game for Harshman. McMichael shaded Sherman in a pitcher's duel, and Bellbrook shut out Beavertown 3 to 0 on the Be-

RESERVES EASILY OUTHITTING REDS; DURNBAUGH LEADS

Imagine a baseball team with a batting average of .388. This happens to be the team average of the Xenia Reserves for the five games played this season. The local nine is averaging eleven runs and thirteen hits per contest. Durnbaugh continues to lead the heavy hitters with an average of .419, obtaining two hits in the Osborn massacre Sunday afternoon. Reserves have a fielding average of .956 averaging about two misplays in the field per game. Here is how the players are hitting: Gertrude Grassel, London and the sweet peas and frezia. Player. AB. LONG, AND LOTS OF TURNING

Frank Bowman, eighteen, is star pitcher of the Hughes High School, Cincinnati, Ohio. He's six feet six and a half in his socks, and an extra foot of pants legs is necessary to cover his knees. He's good because he can almost reach past the batter before he lets go of the ball. He's shown with an average size player.

ANTIOCH HITS BEHIND SMART PITCHING TO BEAT CEDARVILLE

Long distance clouting of the winners featured the 12 to 5 victory of Antioch College over the Cedarville College Yellow-Jackets in a loosely played game Saturday afternoon at Yellow Springs.

Nagley, in the box for Cedarville, was far less effective than usual, and was touched for twelve hits. Antioch scored enough runs to win in the opening two innings, tallying four times in the first and twice in the second. Three runs were added in the fourth, two in the sixth and another in the seventh for good measure.

The fielding of each team was ragged to say the least, both sides making five errors. Cedarville's misplays proving costly. Antioch displayed more hitting power than in any previous game this season.

MacLean pitched for the winners and allowed seven hits, three of which were made by Tanner, Cedarville center fielder. Toomire also obtained three safeties for Antioch.

The base running of the winning team was extraordinary and played no small part in the scoring. Line-ups:

"How can the rations for hogs be improved?" is the subject of the swine experiments now nearing completion and which will be demonstrated for the hog producers of Ohio in a series of Livestock Days arranged by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station and the Agricultural Extension Service of Ohio State University.

The first of the series of demonstrations will be held at the Experiment Station at Wooster on May 27. The livestock will then be moved by special arrangement to Fostoria for exhibition at the stock yards there on May 31, then to Bellefontaine on June 2, and finally to Circleville on June 4, where on the afternoon of that day all stock in the demonstrations will be sold at public auction.

The swine experiments will consist of eighteen lots of eight hogs each. These are divided into two general groups, namely, oats in various combinations in comparison with corn in similar combinations, and the improvement of a ration of corn and tankage for fall pigs by the addition of such feeds as linseed meal, alfalfa meal, coconut meal, soybean oil meal, cottonseed meal or cod-liver oil.

In addition to the swine experiments, there will be eight lots of cattle and four of lambs. The results of all lots will be explained by the men in charge of the work at the Experiment Station. A worthwhile program in addition to the experimental livestock is being arranged at each stop.

TWO IN HOSPITAL AFTER ACCIDENTS

John Sowers, 35, Columbus, and James Puckett, 48, Fairfield, both employees of the Southwestern Portland Cement Co. plant at Osborn, are in Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, in a critical condition, suffering from injuries sustained at the plant Thursday and Friday, respectively.

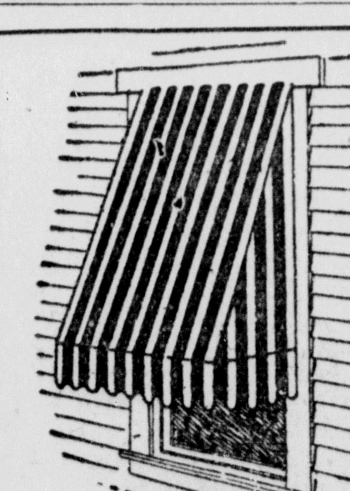

"No-accident week" is to be observed at the plant this week. Sowers' right shoulder was burned to a crisp when he came in contact with high tension wires while installing a transformer on a pole outside the plant. He is the company electrician.

Puckett, a carpenter, received a fractured skull when he fell twenty-five feet from a scaffold while assisting in the construction of a new building.

Another family on the car does not boast about where they were raised because they are much older and much less attractive in appearance. They have been handicapped by round worms.

The sand on which they are sleeping during their excursion is so much preferable to the dirt and filth to which they have been accustomed that they hope their health and appearance will rapidly improve.

The third compartment is occupied by a mother and family of just a few weeks. These pigs will show the effects of the lung stage of the round worm.

In addition to the private car which the pigs will ride there will be a demonstration car filled with other exhibits and a lecture car, according to O. K. Quivey, General Agricultural Agent for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, who will be in charge of the train.

In the exhibit car will be shown all stages of the common round worm from the egg through the lung stage to the adult form which is found in the intestines. Microscopes will be used to show the larvae which are too small to be visible to the eye.

Lungs from infested pigs will be exhibited to show the injury done by the larva during the two weeks they spend in lung tissue.

Simple measures which control these parasites will be explained in this car. These practices if followed will control some diseases and most other internal parasites.

Bowls of feeds will be displayed in order to teach farmers the best sources of protein to use in addition to corn. The Ohio Experiment Station recommends this mixture after conducting several trials. Mineral mixtures are also shown and recommended under certain conditions by the Experiment Station.

Mr. Quivey has followed the results of worm control demonstrations conducted by the university in various counties in Ohio and other states. The success of these demonstrations has been responsible for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad running a special train to spread these practices among the farmers of southwestern Ohio so that their hog products may become more profitable. The train will be in Jamestown the forenoon of June 11.

DR. KELSEY TELLS OF VISIT TO ABYSSINIA AND ROYAL FAMILY

Dr. H. A. Kelsey, vice president of Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio, left New York, March 7 for a visit to the far east, and included in his itinerary was a trip to the one independent monarchy of the east—Abyssinia, where he went at the invitation of His Highness, Tafari Makonnen, emperor of Ethiopia. A recent letter to America indicates that this college professor has had a most delightful and enlightening visit with this king and his people. Abyssinia was one of the most inaccessible places in the world until intercontinental engineers built a railway from Djibouti, the seaport of French Somaliland, to Addis Ababa, the capital of Abyssinia. Few outsiders found their way into this land of Bible antiquity, but now adventurers, prospectors and curiosity seekers are getting in in large numbers, sometimes to the annoyance and discomfort of the quite complacent Ethiopian who does not understand just why he should be thus disturbed.

But this land of Sheba's Queen is rubbing its eyes and yawning with a very real awakening. Her present monarch is a progressive with a capital "P" and the sleep of the centuries since Solomon entertained and aroused her ruler of ancient times is about over. New methods in farming, new processes in marketing her mineral wealth, new highways and schools and sanitary achievements, a new vision of life is springing up under this little man of fearless courage and far seeing eye. He has sent dozens of Abyssinia's choice youth into other lands to gain an education and bring back to him the world's best ideas and they are now beginning to return and in a few years will be his counselors. Muskingum has three of them who are proving the wisdom of Ras Tafari's plan. Others are in England, France, Italy, India, and elsewhere, the largest number being in Victoria College, Alexandria, Egypt. He has also introduced modern farming methods wherever possible, motor cars and trucks are becoming common, especially the American makes, electricity has found its way to cast a new light in a dark land, and embryo attempts at irrigation are being made. Home schools and the beginning of a nation-wide school system most emphatically spell future growth. If prospectors and adventurers, political and commercial, do not too greatly interfere, the world will see what can be done by a patriotic king working out the welfare of his nation.

Dr. Kelsey spent several days at Addis Ababa and a week or more at Dire Dawa and got into touch with Harrar and other points of interest in this interesting kingdom. He also met up with a number of trekking parties who are out mecca for game hunters and ornithologists.

The American Mission Hospital was erected through the generosity of W. S. George, of East Palestine, Ohio, and under the direction of Dr. Thomas A. Lambie, who is now on a furlough in America.

This is a prosperous institution in not only healing the sick, but and doing an unmeasured service setting up a standard of sanitation and health which is needed beyond all things else, perhaps, in this disease infected land. Drs. W. A. Pollock of Pennsylvania, and H. L. Finley recently of Egypt, but for some years a resident of New Concord, Ohio, are carrying on this enterprise, and inspiring other agencies to undertake similar tasks.

One of the interesting features of Dr. Kelsey's visit was a dinner party given by His Highness, Tafari Makonnen, and his wife, the Princess at the royal palace April 12. The guests included four or five other Americans of Addis Ababa, the members of the British and French legations and a few prominent Abyssinians. It was a six course affair served in modern style, and most graciously done. Following the dinner a movie showing the changes that are being brought about in Abyssinia's life, especially her industrial efforts, was put on for the guests. This royal pair proved themselves very apt in entertaining guests and in helping the various groups invited to enjoy the social hour. They had many questions about the boys in school at Muskingum and about America in general and seemed very kindly disposed toward our nation and eager to know more about its life.

Dr. Kelsey is extending his visit to Egypt and Palestine and with his daughter, Miss Elizabeth Kelsey, who has been teaching in Alexandria, will visit points of interest in Europe before his return to America in July.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

The Rovin' Ritzies

By Flo Frederick

The crowd is mighty gay

On this merry circus day!

"Right this way to see the magic-eating Congo man," called Rag, the black-robed magician to the neighborhood kids who were giving their clown-spot tickets to Betty Ann, the gatekeeper and passing on down the roped-in path past the wild caged animals of the famous Ritzie show.

"Right this way," Rag's side-show barking was suddenly cut short as something unexpected happened down the roped-in path. So far everything had gone fine. In spite of all the details that had to be tended to, the Ritzies had managed to have their circus in readiness at the appointed hour and the invited neighbors had arrived on time, carrying balloons and blowing horns. They seemed to be in gay and happy mood, which was a good sign that they would be an appreciative audience.

To have something go wrong now would certainly be the worst of luck. The crowd gathered thick around the African man-eating tiger's cage and Rag thought gloomily to himself that they were all poking fun at the Ritzies for having tried to make Betty's pet cat look like a tiger.

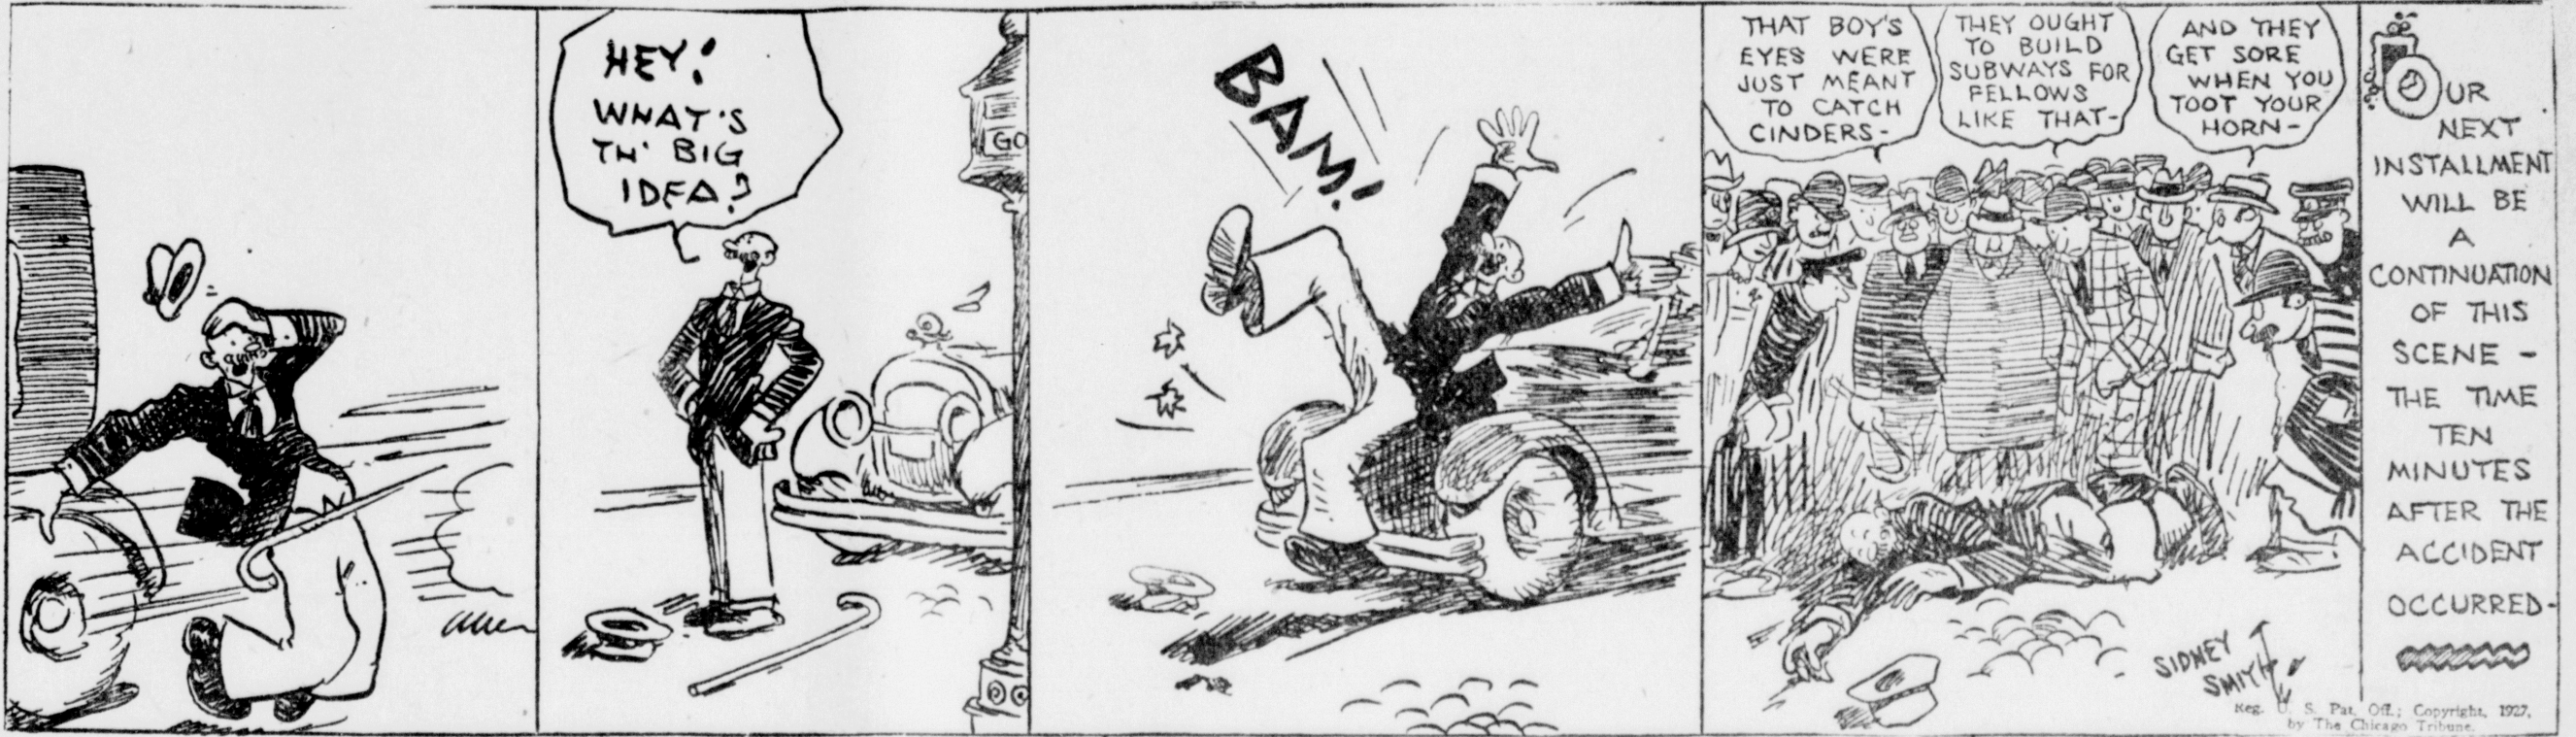

Not daring to join the crowd in his magician's robe, he climbed on the kids were used to seeing. Most important of all, how could they be expected to know that a stray dog had made a pass at Spotty's cage just before the arrival of the guests and that the enraged cat was clawing at her cage in an effort to get at him.

At any rate she had so awed the audience of boys and girls that they were ready to believe anything—even that Rag was a true magician and that the savage-looking Tag was a real Congo man. When he calmly blew out the flame to his candle and devoured it whole they thought the little dark-skinned carpenter shop was laid with magic and were glad to get into the big circus ring.

There they found seats, as the Ritzies had planned boxes all around the roped-in area and waited breathlessly to see what would happen next.

The floor of the ring had been covered with wood shavings and sawdust and in the center stood Marty, dressed as the master of ceremonies in his high-top boots, black felt hat, flowing sash and cracking whip. He took charge of the acts in the big ring with a flourish that thrilled his audience. The fact that Tricky, the Ritzie mascot, forgot a trick or two, that Patsy, in her tinsel-trimmed dance a chair and tried to see down the path over their heads. What he saw chased away his gloominess and brought a big, broad smile instead. This was better than he had dared to hope.

Spotty, Betty's pet angora cat, was pacing up and down her cage, hissing and growling in true tiger fashion. Every now and then she would make a leap toward the front of the cage, clawing the bars in a frenzy to get out. At every forward leap, the group of boys and girls jumped away from the cage as if they were really afraid of the caged tabby.

They surely don't think it's a tiger, thought Rag, and his amazement was indeed great when he heard one of the boys say, "It might be a cub."

"Then it couldn't eat a man," reasoned another of the group.

"But it could eat a boy," argued the first boy, and not wishing to take any chances, the group moved hurriedly down the roped pathway.

Rag jumped off his chair and resumed his calling in his deep magician's voice, but he could not help wondering how Spotty had managed to so utterly fool the audience. Of course, the Ritzies had not taken into consideration the fact that Betty's angora was a house cat and had never been allowed to roam the neighborhood and that it was twice the size of the cats that ing frock, missed one of her cartwheels, or that the twins had been a little slow in changing to their clown costumes, was unnoticed by the excited on-lookers. The tooting and blowing of horns on every side caused such a hubbub that no one could not help being confused.

The clowns had made their startling appearance by bursting through paper hoops right into the midst of Patsy's performance. It was just like a three-ring circus with so many things to watch all at one time.

When bells rang for the whirlwind half-mile race with Rag and Tag as the jockeys for Gold Heels and Black Bottom, the audience was thrown into a panic of shouting. As the twins kicked up the sawdust in their mad rush about the ring on their built-on horses, balloons were let loose and horns were thrown into the air. It was an exciting finish with Gold Heels only a lap behind Black Bottom.

When Marty stepped to the center of the ring and thanked them for their kind attention, the boys and girls could scarcely believe that the circus was over and that Betty had passed her last bag of hot-buttered popcorn.

It was with disappointment that they crawled off their boxes and straggled home. Their only criticism of the circus was that it wasn't long enough!

WILE SAYS:

to this writer: "There is sure to be a big row over the shake-up in the farm loan board, though it will not reach its peak until next winter when congress meets. It is my private opinion that unless the reorganization is publicly satisfactory to farmers, it will be a threat to the administration and the Republican party almost, if not quite, as serious as the veto of the McNary-Haugen bill. Farmers were divided on the latter controversy, but they will be found practically unanimous in condemning changes in the vast agricultural credits organization, unless these can be justified to the farming world."

The administration's attitude toward these "warnings" and toward the accusations that cause them is that President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon deemed the time had come to put rigid business efficiency into the federal farm loan system. This is now a concern with an annual turnover of roundly $2,000,000,000. Although nominally "farmer-owned" to a large extent, as far as the joint-stock land banks and other rural institutions for farm credits are concerned, supervisory responsibility for them is vested in the federal government. . . . For some time the treasury department has felt that the management of the federal farm loan board, which is in general control of the whole scheme, was not being conducted on the best possible lines. In particular, treasury officials were of opinion that methods of examination of farm banks were not as thorough-going as they should be. It was considered that in many directions there was lack of system and sound grasp on the far-flung farm credits scheme.

Strong representations were made at the White House by farm forces against the reorganization which has in the meantime taken place. Agricultural organizations and their leaders feel a jealous pride and sense of proprietorship in the land bank system, and they bitterly oppose any movement the result of which is to remove the land banks further away from control by farm representatives. Messrs. Meyer, Harrison and Cooksey are under fire as being typically representative of "Wall Street," rather than of "dirt farmers," in whose interest the federal farm loan board acts.

Some agricultural authorities express the opinion that a combined Republican-Progressive-Democratic opposition in the seventy-third congress will easily be able to frustrate confirmation of the reorganization of the farm loan board. The opposition, it is predicted, practically assures congressional investigation of the whole farm loan system. One of those who is fomenting the movement in that direction asserts that the investigation will naturally "turn the light upon the interest of certain persons in having the system brought under the domination of the treasury department."

The same authority claims that such an investigation was held in check last winter only by the efforts of former friends of the farm loan system, who feared a possible reaction on farm loan and bond sales. These friends are said now to feel that the time for hesitation is past. With nearly 500,000 farmer-stockholders owing the entire federal land bank system, and chafing because they claim they are now excluded from any effective voice in its management, the political barometer seems set for stormy weather on Capitol Hill next year. The effect upon the 1928 presidential campaign, it is obvious, might be considerable.

Farm leaders declare Messrs. Jones, Cooper and Landes were ousted from the farm loan board because of their opposition to a treasury proposal which would have required farm loan banks to foreclose on any farm borrower more than ninety days delinquent in interest.

My Son's Sweethearts

by IDA McGLONE GIBSON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:

The entrance of America into the World War finds Phillip Wynne Tracy IV suffering from the collapse of his first passionate love affair. Before this he and Natalie Jones, who is the daughter of the Tracy's millman, had had a childish engagement which, however, had been objected to by both Mr. Jones and Mrs. Tracy.

Phillip becomes interested in Lyra Hilliard, an old friend of his mother's. He takes her to luncheon and shortly finds he is falling in love. The whole affair, however, sinks into nothingness because war is declared, and after writing a cruel letter to Phillip, Lyra leaves without seeing him or his mother.

Red and Phil are the first to enlist. Red and Phillip start for the barracks. Natalie goes to the airport to see them off, and in her anxiety to see Phil she speaks Red harshly. This nearly breaks his heart.

Phillip writes to his mother and asks her to be good to Natalie. Phillip finds he must leave for the southern training camp before seeing his mother again.

Enter the story further unfolds—

CHAPTER XXIV
PHILLIP MAKES AN UNEXPECTED CALL

A FEW days after Phil had reached the training camp he received a letter from his mother. He had, of course, expected a wire, and had begun to get rather worried. It had never entered his mind that the news that he had started for the camp would not be the most momentous she could possibly receive, unless she had learned that he was going across immediately.

Before he opened her letter, a little sinking of the heart told him she had waited to write, but at that he was not prepared for its contents. "Dearest Son:

"Of course you can conceive how disappointed I was to receive your telegram saying you had been ordered south. It was like bidding you good-bye all over again.

"Major Aukland, however, assures me that you will probably not leave France for many months. If that is found to be true, I will come down there.

"I do not suppose that you remember Major Aukland, Phillip. He was very kind to me after your father died. He left America for England, however, when you were eight years old, and I had not seen him since until I ran into him at a Red Cross meeting the other day, and we renewed our old friendship.

"We had kept up an occasional correspondence at first, but it died out as such things always do, and I suspect he had almost forgotten me as I had him. He tells me he has come now that America has entered the war, and joined the National Red Cross. He was a major in the Spanish war, which makes him a little odd for active duty in the regular army.

"I told him about your enlisting and he seemed to think that it was splendid for you to go and very brave for me to let you. He would have been back to Washington he sent me a wire asking if I would not like to come down there and work at the headquarters? He told me that it would be impossible for me to go across, because they were about issuing an order that no mothers of sons in the service would be allowed in overseas work.

"Of course, I immediately went over to Washington, and was there when your wire came to the house, telling me you had been ordered south. It was relayed to me after some delay, as you know. I had left in charge, had unexpectedly gone to the hospital with quinsy.

"Dear heart, I have now come home to pack up a few things and go back, for I do think I can help out a little.

"After 17 years of managing my big home and my financial operations, and being most successful at both, I can bring that experience to the Red Cross with efficiency and profit to the organization."

Phil almost dropped the letter before he had finished it. It did not sound at all like his mother who had never before spoken to him about any of her financial or business affairs.

He had always found his increasing allowance since he entered the grammar school at the bank in his name—he had usually spent it before the month was half over and she financed him until next payday.

If he thought of money or business at all in reference to his mother he had a vague idea that her house was run by Nonnie and the other servants and the bills were paid by the estate lawyer and the Trust and Security company.

ALMOST with distaste he picked up his mother's letter again and continued reading:

He went in and shut the door.

will not have time to think. "By the way, I have just remembered that an old school friend of mine married a man by the name of Tennis and went to El Paso to live. Maria Tennis had a daughter whom she named after herself and who must be about your age.

"I am enclosing a note for Maria. I know she will be nice to you, not only for my sake, but for your own. "Dear Boy, I am the saddest and happiest woman in the world—the saddest because you, my son, are facing—I know not what—and happiest because Major Aukland has made it possible for me to work so hard that there will be occasionally, here and there, a moment when I shall forget.

"I love you, dear, and am lost without you. I am always asking myself why I let you go.

"Mother."

As though he could not understand it all, Phillip folded the letter carefully and looked up at the sky. It was a dome of brass that reflected the hot and uncomfortable sand.

His mother! Was it possible that his mother had written him the letter he had just read?

Was it possible that his mother could write him a newsy letter almost wholly about herself and her own affairs? It seemed to Phillip Tracy as though his new strange world that he had just entered was about to tumble about his head.

He could not conceive that his mother could have any interest in life that did not concern him personally and individually.

The idea of her giving up the old home and going to Washington until the end of the war was unthinkable. He racked his brain to place this Major Aukland, of whom her letter was so full. He could not remember him.

Of course, he was some man who wanted to get his clutches on his mother's money. She ought to realize that she was too old to attract a man. He stopped as he felt his face grow hot. His common sense whispered that he who had been howled over by Lyra Hilliard—a woman nearly the age of his mother—might not be considered capable of judging how old a woman must be before she would cease to attract some man.

The more he thought of it, however, the more hurt and angry he got.

His mother should have stayed where he left her. After all, he was the head of his father's house. He could not picture her established in Washington.

He was cut adrift. He seemed to have lost everything that he had ever felt was his own. First, because of a moment's madness, Natalie had told him she would never marry him. Then, because he thought he must be patriotic and follow in his father's footsteps, he had joined up for this silly old war, which up to date had had neither thrills nor glory, consisting, as it did, of bad food, hard work and continual being sworn at by ignorant "non-coms and shave-tails."

AND Lyra Hilliard—why had she picked on him? Could no woman resist a little attention from a man, young or old? Phil shook himself as though to get away from all these unpleasant thoughts. He was also a little ashamed to have put his mother in the same category with Lyra Hilliard. He even smiled a little as he saw Red coming from the company tailor with the two bars on his sleeve which had been given him that morning. But his pride in Rod's being made a corporal held a sting, as he knew that in the nature of things it would spoil some of their intimate friendship. Nevertheless, he snapped into a salute and asked: "What are you going to do tonight, Corporal? I'd like to celebrate with you."

"Sorry, Wynne, I will be on duty tonight," and passed on.

That evening Phil, who had been getting more and more discontented for Rod had been very busy all day, wandered into town and ordered a room at the hotel, revealed in a very hot bath, dressed and brushed his clothes, shoes and hair with the same scrupulous precision, and went down to dinner.

As he was shown to his table, he passed Lieutenant Andrews and one of the prettiest girls he ever saw. He found himself nearly opposite his commanding officer, but that did not keep him from smiling at the girl.

She, having no reverence for the red tape of the army, and noting that the private was handsomer than the officer she was with, returned his smiles with interest. The two managed to work up a gay little flirtation before Phil finished his dinner.

"The lieutenant will probably put me on K. P. tomorrow," he said to himself, as with a gay wave of his hand he swung out of the door.

"Who is that girl in there with Lieutenant Andrews," he asked the man at the desk.

"That is Miss Maria Tennis," answered the clerk.

Hastily taking out his mother's letter of introduction to her mother, he wrote on the back of it: "May I call soon?"

Then he very ostentatiously called a waiter and stood at the dining room door until he caught her nod of permission, and incidentally the raging fury of the lieutenant.

As he left the dining room he realized that he was lonely. He cursed Rod. He walked out aimlessly, until all at once he became aware that he was in a narrow street filled entirely with men.

Each side of this street was lined with what seemed to be a great high wall pierced alternately with a window and a door—a window and a door.

When these doors were open and curtains were up, one could catch a glimpse through them of a bed, a chair, a chest of drawers and a half-open bathroom, while almost always a woman stood at the doorway with beckoning smiles.

With a distasteful shrug of the shoulders, Phil passed on until he was stopped by the sound of a rasping cough. He raised his eyes to the face of a frail girl, very young and evidently very sick and miserable.

Her eyes challenged him with her unhappiness.

He stared at her for a moment, and then brushing her inside, he went in and shut the door.

WHEN CHARLES LINDBERGH WAS A LITTLE BOY

This cosy house on the outskirts of Little Falls, Minn., was the boyhood home of Charles Lindbergh, now the whole world's pet. The pictures below show the flyer as a youngster, with his father, former congressman, now dead, and the most recent portrait of Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, his mother.

"ANGEL" HEYWARD

Less than a year ago DuBose Heyward was almost unknown to Northern readers, although Southerners have been watching his rapid rise as a poet with much interest. Last year he published his first novel "Porgy," which painted as true a picture of the Negro of the seacoast as Joel Chandler Harris gave us of the inland dandy. Because the dialect was so different from that of the inland Negro, many Northerners did not care for "Porgy."

Now once again Heyward is picturing the life of the south as he knows it. This time it is the people of his own native mountains that he chooses to portray. The plot is in no way unusual but the author develops it with a surety of touch and an understanding of what the approach of the lowland civilization is doing to the mountaineer that makes of this book one way above the average.

The story has to do with Angel Thornley and Buck Merritt primarily and their struggle to get more from life than the rest of their acquaintances. Angel, the daughter of a zealous, narrow minded mountain preacher, falls in love with Buck Merritt. For generations Merritt's people have been making whiskey and Buck sees no reason why he should be the one to stop. That Angel's father will never permit her to marry a whiskey man is realized by both but does not prevent their love from blossoming and bearing fruit.

Unfortunately Angel's father learns of their love and to separate the two informs on Buck. In the attempt to capture the boy one of the ravenous men is wounded and at a trial the judge gives Buck a ten year sentence. By this time Angel realizes that she is to have a child but her father will not permit her to marry Buck. Instead he forces her to marry Stan Galloway, a widower from "back along." In this way Thornley hopes to hide Angel's disgrace. The girl consents to the marriage with the understanding that when Buck comes out she must go to him for she has told him that she will be waiting.

The rest of the story tells the effect the years have upon Angel and Buck. For Angel there is the struggle to keep the mountains from breaking her and taking her youth from her. To Buck, in prison, the years bring realization that one must work with the law, not against it, and resolve to improve himself and be worthy of Angel at the end of the term.

The story is told straight forwardly with absolute realism and yet it is as entirely devoid of the sordidness and coarseness of "Red Tails" as it is of the sentimentality of Fox's tales of the Kentucky mountains.

It has the charm of "The Quare Women," the strength and purpose we found in "So Big" and the appeal of "Patricia Ellen."

I believe that this book will make a name for Heyward as a novelist and it will do much to popularize him.

Rheumatism can't be rubbed away

Are you one of those unfortunate who suffer with pains in your muscles and joints, making you miserable, less efficient, interfering with your working hours, ruining your sleep?

You may have tried many things without relief. Why not try S.S.S.? For more than 100 years it has been giving relief in thousands of cases, as testified in unsolicited letters of gratitude.

"I suffered from rheumatism for a good many years. At times my joints would swell so, I couldn't walk. I tried most everything. Went to Hot Springs and finally I decided to try S.S.S. I took a course in a short time the rheumatic pains entirely left me. I also had a breakdown on my hands for years that nothing would heal, but now this has disappeared, and I am sure that it was S.S.S. which removed the cause. I am now in perfect health, and want to add that I have tried all kinds of medicines but I think S.S.S. is the best." Carl C. Campbell, 115 West Main Street, Johnson City, Tenn.

S.S.S. is purely vegetable. It is extracted from the fresh roots of medicinal plants and herbs and gives to Nature what she needs in building you up so that your system throws off the cause.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

NATION PAYS TRIBUTE TO HERO DEAD

LINDBERGH ARRIVES SAFELY IN LONDON

FLYER RISES EARLY TO PRESERVE PLANE FROM ADMIRING MOB

Hero Barely Escapes
Crashing When Ship
Is Landed

LONDON, May 30.—Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh's solicitude for his airplane—"The Spirit of St. Louis"—which barely escaped being crushed upon landing at Croydon air-drome at 6:07 yesterday evening by the rush of scores of thousands of hero worshipers, brought him out of bed at 7 o'clock this morning.

While American Ambassador A. B. Houghton and most of the members of the embassy staff were still sleeping Lindbergh was up and dressed and on his way to the flying field.

Ambassador Houghton's personal valet was on hand and offered to assist Capt. Lindbergh in dressing but the young aviator smilingly declined. He was soon enroute to the flying field.

Lindbergh expressed a desire to fly back to the United States, rather than return aboard the warship which President Coolidge has tendered him, and which he terms as "too slow."

Speaking to newspaper men at the American embassy, Lindbergh said he would like to investigate a more southerly route across the Atlantic than the one he followed in his historic flight. He said he believed the southern route might offer better possibilities for a regular commercial air line than his route of the most direct line from Newfoundland to Ireland, because if necessary, the journey could be broken at the Azores on the southern route.

Lindbergh said he would like to investigate the southern route with commercial possibilities specifically in mind.

MEMORIAL DAY

THOUSANDS ATTEND ARLINGTON PROGRAM

Capital Leads Country In Annual Observance—
President Delivers Address At National Cemetery

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The capital led the nation to-day in paying reverential tribute to the thousands who have given their lives in its defense.

The great national cemetery at Arlington, where the white headstones march in endless ranks over the green Virginia hillsides, was the mecca of thousands of visitors. There was scarcely a stone but bore its burden of bright colored flowers, and tiny flags.

President Coolidge went to the beautiful white amphitheatre soon after the noon hour to speak his tribute to the nation's defenders. At the same time, and throughout the day, there were memorial services in the churches all over the city.

The tomb of Admiral George Dewey, hero of the Spanish war, at Mt. St. Albans was especially decorated, as was that of the late war president, Woodrow Wilson, nearby.

Countless wreaths were placed on the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington, where special memorial services were held before the president spoke.

Veterans' organizations held memorial services throughout the city.

WEATHER MENACING NATIONAL BALLOON RACE BEFORE START

Low Pressure Areas May Mean Hazardous
Air Trip

AKRON, O., May 30.—With low pressure disturbances reported approaching Ohio from the west, a short-distance contest was forecast today in the national balloon race, scheduled to start from the Cleveland-Akron speedway here at 4:30 p. m.

Although clear skies and comparatively calm air currents greeted early test officers, who took the air to ascertain atmospheric conditions, it was being predicted that approaching low pressure "spots" might make this the most hazardous balloon race in years. That dreaded foe of all balloonists—lightning—may accompany the reported low pressure area, making it doubly dangerous for the pilots and aides who occupy the baskets underneath the huge gas-filled bags.

After a study of official weather forecasts and latest telegraphic reports, it was deemed best to call a consultation at ten o'clock this morning, which was to be attended by all pilots and officers concerned, for the purpose of discussing the situation.

In the meantime, work of laying out the great envelopes was proceeding. Each basket was to be provided with two-day food rations, and the customary emergency ration. Radio sets were to be installed to enable the contestants to receive regular weather reports from the country's high powered radio stations.

The three bags covering the greatest distance, remaining unpaired, will win the privilege of representing the United States in the International Balloon Races starting from Denver next September.

The balloon traversing the greatest distance will win the Litchfield trophy, now held by the Akron chapter, N. A. A., as the result of Pilot Wade Van Orman's last victory won while representing the Goodyear Company. Van Orman is on the job for the same concern today.

While the bags were being inflated this morning, the 1927 airplane contest, sponsored by the Akron-Beacon Journal, was to be held from the horse race tracks adjoining the speedway.

An airplane review was scheduled to start at 1:30 p. m. featured by a triple parachute leap from a Martin bomber. Included on the plane review program was a pursuit plane race, in which Selfridge field pilots, flying the world's swiftest combat machines were to participate. Mimic warfare was also listed on the plane program.

ROMAN SHEET FIRST PAPER IN WORLD

COLUMBUS, O., May 30.—The "Acta Diurna" of Rome, published in 60 B. C., is accredited as being the first newspaper in the world by the May edition of the Ohio Newspaper, published by the Department of Journalism at Ohio State University.

The Ohio publication claims that the Rome newspaper was in the form of a bulletin post in the most frequented spot in Rome. It told of the daily acts and decisions of the senators.

According to the Ohio Newspaper, however, the first conveyers of news in history were made on clay tablets long before Caesar was heralded as leader of the Romans. Some of the tablets are known to have been inscribed as far back as 6,000 B. C.

The "news letters" followed the Roman lead. The last name were written letters relating to all the news of the day. In 1457, the first printed news letter, the "Nuremberg Gazette," appeared.

The first real newspaper in the English language was published in Amsterdam in 1620, the year when the Pilgrims migrated from the old country to America. Two years later, the "London Weekly News" appeared as the first newspaper printed in London.

WILE SAYS:

Farm Loan Policy
Fight Expected
Mellon Is Target
Washington Notes

By FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927

WASHINGTON, May 30.—President Coolidge has no sooner signaled his intention to spend the summer in the heart of the farming west than there comes from that region a warning that the administration's agricultural credits policy is to be subjected in the next Congress to furious attack. The same groups which demanded McNary-Haugen farm-relief legislation are preparing to assail, hip and thigh, the recent re-organization of the Federal Farm Loan Board.

The appointments of Eugene Meyer, Jr., as head of the board, and Floyd R. Harrison and George R. Cooksey as members of the board, are to be the targets at which the farm opposition will shoot. Messrs. Meyer, Harrison and Cooksey having been transferred bodily from the directorate of the War Finance Corporation, leaders of agricultural organizations are charging that the federal farm credits system has now come under the "domination" of Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury. Dating from the time Mr. Mellon publicly assailed McNary-Haugenism, he has ranked as one of the chief aversions of the farm politicians.

According to plans now under discussion among agricultural leaders, and freely commented upon in their official publications, hostilities at Washington will open when the president submits the appointment of Messrs. Meyer, Harrison and Cooksey to the senate for confirmation. These new farm loan board members supersede Edward E. Jones, of Pennsylvania; Robert A. Cooper, of South Carolina, and Elmer S. Landes, of Ohio.

One of the foremost farm editors in the country has just said

FOUR AVIATORS DIE WHEN HUGE BOMBER CRASHES TO GROUND

Motor Goes Dead—Plane
Thrown Into Nose
Dive

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 30.—Four aviators of the United States army squadron en route from San Antonio to Langley Field, Virginia, were burned to death yesterday when the left motor of their airplane went dead 600 feet above the flying field.

The plane fell to the ground in flames.

The dead are:
Second Lieutenant Dan F. Voorhees, air corps service, pilot of the plane.

Staff Sergeant Clifford Glenn, Fifty-ninth service squadron.

Staff Sergeant James Read, Twentieth bombardment squadron.

Corporal Melvin Andrews, Fifty-ninth service squadron.

The plane, one of the fourteen modern bombers that had participated in the maneuvers at San Antonio, had ascended 500 feet to wait for the other planes to take off when the motor went dead, throwing the plane into a nose dive.

It was in flames when the machine struck the ground and comrades were unable to go to the rescue of the occupants. When they finally succeeded in extricating the bodies they had been almost incinerated.

Several thousand persons saw the accident. They had gathered early this morning at the flying field to witness the take-off of the bombers that had stopped here Friday on their way back to Langley Field.

IDENTIFY "PURPLE STREAK" BANDIT

ELYRIA, O., May 30.—The bandit who was killed in a battle with police here after holding up an Elyria store, has been identified by relatives as Irwin Short, of Port Clinton, Ohio, wanted at Elmore for burglary of a bank, and in Toledo for auto theft. Two of the victims of the "purple cap" bandit who spread terror in northwestern Ohio several weeks ago by a series of robberies and holdups have also identified Short as the man who robbed them, of officers said.

The condition of Police Chief E. J. Stankard, seriously wounded by the bandit in the gun battle here, is improving, and hopes were entertained for his recovery.

COMPETITIVE WAGE SCALE IS NO CURE FOR COAL INDUSTRY ILLS

BELLAIRE, O., May 30.—The proposed competitive wage scale is no cure for the ills of the Ohio coal industry according to Lee Hall, president of the Ohio miners. He declared that a reduction in wages for Ohio miners would be met by a similar reduction in the non union fields and that when wages had been lowered until another reduction is no longer possible, longer hours would result. Hall informed newspapermen that he was willing to debate the question with any of the operators or representative at any time and any place.

The rank and file of the miners is standing firm in its demand for the Jacksonville scale said Hall. Questioned about the operation of the two Pittsburgh coal company mines in the Pomeroy field he admitted that about 500 men were working producing about one half of the normal output of the mines. Hall explained that the company stores in the non union field and at Pomeroy had proved to be a boomerang for the business men who advocated the reduction in wages and resumption of the mines.

CROWD OF 50,000 ATTEND FIELD MASS

CINCINNATI, O., May 30.—A crowd estimated at 50,000 stood with bared heads under the heat of a terrific sun here yesterday, at St. Xavier college, in an open air amphitheatre, listening to a pontifical high mass, participated in by a choir of 11,000 children's voices in what was pronounced the greatest religious demonstration ever held in Ohio. The Rt. Rev. Francis J. Beckman, bishop of Lincoln, Nebraska, and president of the National Catholic Students Mission Crusade, under whose auspices the demonstration was held, celebrated the mass.

Three hundred persons, including many of the child singers, fainted from the heat and press of the throng, but no serious results were reported.

AMBASSADOR HERRICK ATTACKS BOLSHEVISM IN MEMORIAL TALK

Compares Russian Political Move To "Loathsome Malady"—Says Russia Example Of Moral Debacle

PARIS, May 30.—The American ambassador, Myron T. Herrick, in a Memorial Day speech at the American Military Cemetery at Suresnes today, vigorously attacked the "scourge of bolshevism," which he characterized as a political disease.

"We intend to protect our country as vigorously from bolshevism as our ancestors defended it against tyranny," he declared, "and the fact that a government secretly sends against us the germs of a loathsome, deadly, instead of openly dispatching armies, does not make the invasion less felonious or alter our duty to repel it."

"The brave men who lie in these graves, by the sacrifice of their precious lives, helped to save their country from a conquering despotism; then let us here resolve that it shall not now be rotted by a deliberately spread disease."

"We have no thought of attacking the Soviet regime in Russia; what it does on its own 'reservation' is its own affair. But we do object, with all the earnestness of a self-respecting nation, and quite regardless of material considerations, to giving to its leaders the means and opportunity for poisoning us."

Ambassador Herrick made a plea for peace and declared that the problem of war, its causes, its possible recurrence and the likelihood of curbing it, have never been studied so earnestly as now.

"If the enthusiasm over the prospect of enforcing peace which prevailed ten years ago has somewhat diminished," he said, "the determination to get to the bottom of the question has not, and the investigation goes on the noblest spirit as evidenced by M. Briand's peace proposal of April 6 to outlaw war."

"Modern methods of scientific research are being applied to the scourge of war just as they are applied to the scourge of cancer and all this in itself is a helpful sign. The twentieth century can best work with twentieth century tools, whether the effort be directed toward increasing the sum of human enjoyment or toward diminishing man's inherited instincts for violence and conflict."

"I believe that the people in every country must choose between order and anarchy, between honesty and thievery, between everyday virtue and crime," he continued. "Either we believe in orderly society or we don't; if we do we ought to use all the power within us to defend and advance it. The impudent, mischievous interference of paid, organized propaganda in the administration of governments throughout the world has gone steadily on, and, in common with others, I have been forced by these events, to view with increasing apprehension this sinister movement."

"The case of Russia," the ambassador said, "is the saddest example of a moral debacle known to history, and the results which have followed the patient efforts and forbearance of healthy nations in dealing with this insidious menace are most discouraging, for we believe in the beneficence of our tried forms of government which we consider have demonstrated their capacity to lead mankind on to its highest estate."

"For centuries civilized people have tenaciously and heroically struggled, not merely for political freedom, but for the widest diffusion of human happiness, and at the moment when they had reason to believe that this long effort was being crowned with success, they are met with a new experiment in government, in the name of the people, which, thus far, seems to the world in general more tyrannical and oppressing than any preceding despotism. That the masters of this new regime profess to speak in a great people's name deceives nobody and need not be taken into consideration."

THREE INJURED IN FASCIST RIOTING

CLEVELAND, O., May 30.—Three men were recovering from slight injuries and four were at liberty on bond today, charged with disturbing the peace, as the result of an anti-Fascist riot staged here yesterday at St. Rocco Church. A thousand persons milled about the church, battling with bricks and other impromptu weapons, when the local fascist post donned black shirts and endeavored to hold ceremonies in connection with the dedication of a new post flag. Sentiment of the crowd was said by police to have been about evenly divided, and shouts of "Liberty for Italy!" mingled with cries of "Vive Mussolini!" The dedication was abandoned, after catcalls and brickbats hurled through the church windows made it impossible to continue.

THREE KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Sex Hypnosis Plea Saves in Gray Parallel

NEWTON, N. J. (U.N. Special).—Sex hypnosis!

The same defense that saved Henry Judd Gray has saved the life of Frank Van Sickle.

Van Sickle, in a case remarkable for its similarity to the Snyder murder case, has won a sentence of life imprisonment on his plea that he murdered Edward Raser while under the same influence of Mrs. Sadie Raser that Gray was of Mrs. Ruth Snyder.

As Gray loved Mrs. Snyder, so did Van Sickle love Mrs. Raser. As Albert Snyder was found dead, so was Raser. He was shot to death as he walked across his farm in Sandyston township on September 28, 1925.

Van Sickle was brought to trial. Just as Gray admitted the crime, Van Sickle admitted his. His defense was identical with Gray's, that he was under the compelling influence of the woman in the case—sex hypnosis.

Gray, with Mrs. Snyder, was convicted in the first degree by an all male jury and sentenced to be electrocuted. Raser was tried alone.

On the jury were five women, including Mrs. Ethel Dewey, foreman. Perhaps women are more ready to believe that they wield a hypnotic influence of men. The jury found Raser guilty—he had admitted every thing, but recommended life imprisonment.

"Mrs. Raser said she wanted to get her husband out of the way and marry me. I refused at first but was under her spell," Van Sickle had told the jurors.

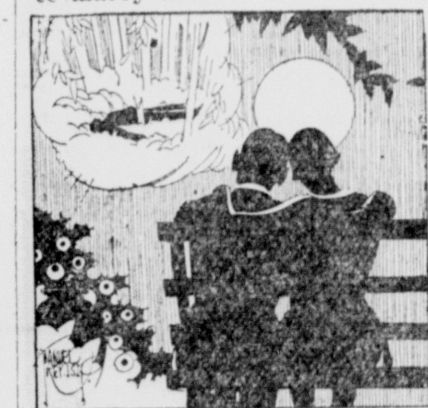

As a result of his testimony, New Jersey officials said they would move to bring Mrs. Raser to trial on a murder charge. She is already under charges of conspiracy and attempted poison.

The body of Edward Raser, country club keeper, was found shot to death in a field near Sandyston, N. J. Frank Van Sickle, an admirer of Mrs. Raser, admitted the crime.

Van Sickle's plea of "sex hypnosis" closely paralleled that of Henry Judd Gray, accused of murdering her husband. Van Sickle said Mrs. Raser wished to marry him.

Van Sickle's only defense was that he was under the hypnotic influence of Mrs. Raser. A jury, including five women, granted his attorney's plea not to cause his execution. He got life.

As a result of his testimony, Mrs. Raser, already charged with conspiracy and attempting to poison her husband, may face a charge of murder. She is about Mrs. Snyder's age.

BALLOON TROPHY AND DONOR

P. W. Litchfield and the cup he donated for National Balloon Competition

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1927

AKRON, O., May 30.—Any one of three racing teams which will represent this city in the 1927 national balloon race from the Akron-Cleveland speedway will bring the P. W. Litchfield trophy to a permanent berth in Akron.

When the Goodyear president offered the trophy in 1925 he specified that it should become the permanent property of any chapter of the National Aeronautic association whose representative should win the race three years in succession. For two consecutive years, 1925 and 1926, the trophy has been won by Akron balloonists and it is hoped that, with three chances, Akron aeronauts will achieve permanent possession.

The trophy, designed by Tiffany, is a thirty-inch-high loving cup, surmounted by a cover with a winged Pegasus on top. A silver panel on the pedestal displays a Zeppelin in full flight.

Carl K. Wollam and Ward T. Van Orman were the first winners of the trophy and brought it to Akron in 1925. Wollam will pilot the balloon "Beacon Journal" in this year's Memorial Day race, and will be accompanied by Howard Wolf, a newspaper man. In his first victory he flew 1,073 miles from San Antonio, Tex., to within a few miles of the Canadian border.

Van Orman, who accompanied Wollam in 1925, was the winner in the following year, when he and W. W. Morton drifted 845 miles from Little Rock, Ark., to Petersburg, Va., and retained the cup for Akron. The same team will handle the Goodyear company's entry in this year's race.

Akron's third hope rests in Jack Boettner and J. F. Cooper in the "Scripps-Howard." Boettner was the winner last year in the Detroit News race.

Mrs. Isadore Middleton, 78, died at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Hazard, at Middleton's Corner, southeast of Xenia, Monday morning at 7 o'clock. She had been an invalid for five years, her condition becoming serious during the past two weeks, following a stroke of paralysis.

Mrs. Middleton was born June 3, 1849 in Richmond, Ind., and came to Middleton's Corner as a bride of eighteen years. She had spent the rest of her life there.

Her husband, B. J. Middleton, preceded her in death, eight years last March. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Carrie E. Davis, near New Burlington and Mrs. Margaret Hazard, at home. Another daughter, Mrs. Laura Raser, died sixteen years ago. Three grandchildren and four great grandchildren, also survive. Mrs. Middleton was the last member of her immediate family.

Funeral services will be held at the home at Middleton's Corner, Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, with interment at Woodland Cemetery, Xenia.

"SICK-HEADACHES?"

Torturing, maddening! Most always trace them to a lazy liver, constipation and a sour-sick stomach. Poison of fermented foods retained, instead of passing, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissues, it causes congestion and that acute, sickening pain.

Blackburn's Casca-Royal Pills quickly and surely remove the cause by stimulating the liver, turning up the bowels, making the poison-ferments move on and out, thus purifying the blood and curing the headaches. The effect is almost instantaneous.

Women, because of their sensitive organism are especially prone to periodical headaches, should not suffer if a drugstore is nearby—for Blackburn's Casca-Royal Pills have helped millions during the past 25 years. Non-secret formula, small, sweet, pleasant and "Better Than Castor Oil."

Two sizes 15c-30c.

BIBLE THOUGHT

FELLOWSHIP:—We took sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company, Psalm 55:14.

DISCREDITS POPULAR MOVE

However much Sinclair Lewis' book, "Elmer Gantry" may have thrown disparagement upon the clergy, Havelock Ellis, of England, has offered a healing balm for wounds in an article recently published with reference to the preponderance of geniuses in the families of clergymen. This man has made a study of the parentage of men and women of genius and he finds that in Great Britain preachers have had famous children far out of proportion to their own numbers.

The preponderance of famous men and women contributed by the families of the clergy is simply enormous. Doctors, lawyers and army officers combined have not produced as many famous children as have the clergy. Ellis does not attempt to explain why this is so. He simply states the fact. But there is always a relation between cause and effect, and there must be some cause for this preponderance of prominence among the children who come from the parsonage.

It must either be in the profession itself or in the ability to lead those under its influence into high places. It is suggested that perhaps this is a reward for the material sacrifices the clergy usually has to make. Any one who has ever heard Bishop Edwin Hughes' lecture on "Children of the Manse," will agree with Ellis that clergymen have given the world an unusually large number of worthy sons and daughters.

It will take more than a book like Elmer Gantry to injure the influence of the great body of men who have constituted the class of which Gantry is supposed to be a representative.

ONE PROBLEM LEADS TO ANOTHER

One of the chief worries of the flood committees is to get the residents of the flood regions out of the way of the flood. All the program for the future turns upon the proposition of getting the residents of the lowlands moved back again, as soon after the waters have passed as is possible—and established in business at the old stand.

The fact that there is no place like home is only partially stated in the comparison between mere "humbleness," and the sort of thing described as pleasures and palaces.

The real drawing power of home does not begin to demonstrate until a man sitting on a housetop, with such of his family around him as could get there, is ordered to come away and refuses the order.

One reason the problem of flood-prevention or control now looms so large as a national issue is that those who live in the flood lands propose to go on living there.

WIDER ROADS FOR MORE CARS

The American Research Foundation finds that it is becoming a pressing necessity to widen the arterial highways, especially near large cities. In a few years, it declares, we will have 30,000,000 cars; and its bulletin adds:

"It is estimated that good roads now save the highway users $750,000,000 a year. Motorists pay the bulk of road building expenses, but probably profit the least by it. Land values have been enormously increased by highways, the benefits extending to farmers in remote sections. With the growth of our cities more and wider highways in their vicinity are a vital necessity, not only for passenger traffic but to facilitate the transportation of food and supplies into the population centers."

EDUCATION PRODUCES WEALTH

Education is the greatest of all wealth producers in the United States, according to Dr. John S. Noffsinger, of Philadelphia, widely known educator.

"Per capita wealth in the five states which maintained the most efficient educational systems was twice that of the five states with the least efficient schooling systems in 1926," says Dr. Noffsinger. "Adult education has received its greatest stimulus in the past 18 years. During this period the expansion of industry has made necessary the training of a large number of executives and specialists for positions of importance in much the same way that the needs of the army required the establishment of training camps for officers at the beginning of the world war."

"Home study schools and universities have enrolled more than 5,000,000 students in higher business and professional courses in that period. Thus it is clear that education is the principal reason that the income of the United States has leaped from $27,100,000,000 in 1909 to $39,200,000,000 in 1916, and to $89,000,000,000 in 1926."

NEARING THE JOURNEY'S END

KELLYGRAMS by FRED C KELLY

OUR DAILY CLUES

Poor, stupid Judd Gray, of the Snyder murder case, made a mess of what he thought was a perfect alibi, partly because he forgot to destroy the stub of his Pullman ticket and tossed it into the waste basket in his hotel room.

But if it hadn't been the Pullman ticket which gave a fatal clue it would have been something else. Modern life has grown so complicated that we daily leave hundreds of clues about our movements without knowing it.

In the days when men lived in rude shelters in the woods and hunted for their food, without need of much contact with their fellows, it might have been difficult to trace a man who tried to keep in hiding, or to know what he had been doing. About the only clue to his movements were footprints. But today we find an amazing number and variety of clues by which a man's route and identity may be established.

We write and receive letters, buy food, cash checks, send laundry, use the telephone, ride in taxicabs and in Pullman cars. Every Pullman car has a name and the berth or seat you occupy has a number. The porter has a name and perhaps a memory of faces. In other words, there are not only human contacts but minute records which single out one person from hundreds of others doing about the same things.

You hail a taxicab and later wish to deny that you were in that particular cab or where you went in it. But the taxicab bears a number and so does the driver. The meter shows exactly how far it was driven. It traveled over streets bearing names and numbers from one definite spot to another. All those items are possible clues. The old saying appears to be true that when a man tries to hide anything he is sure to forget at least one detail which may be his undoing.

I know of a case in which a man found it desirable to take valuable plunder and documents from his room and place them where he alone could find them. He packed them in an old trunk hauled a taxicab and took the trunk to an obscure warehouse. In dealing with the warehouse people he even took the precaution to use a false name. Surely that trunk was safely hidden!

Yet when the police became suspicious of that man they had not the slightest difficulty in finding his trunk full of evidence.

The man had neglected to destroy or secrete the little warehouse receipt for his trunk and left it in a pigeonhole of his desk. Stick to the narrow path, because if you stray you'll be caught!

How to Achieve Beauty

THE UNIVERSAL FLAPPER

This week I am going to devote my articles to suggestions for keeping your body, symmetrical, limber and fit—both inside and out, because, after all, these are the fundamentals on which all real beauty is built.

Youth is the birthright of every woman, but it takes wisdom and care to retain it, and thank goodness more and more women are learning how to stay eternally young.

This seems to be the age of the universal flapper. The woman of today who is fifty or more can vie successfully for favor alongside of her youthful sister who may not even be thirty. Youth is the very blood of the majority of the modern women. Bobbed hair, youthful figures and short skirts have bridged the gap from sixteen to sixty, and mothers and daughters are in reality sisters under the skin.

One does not see any more fat, tottering old women or thin, timid-looking little ladies with stooped shoulders and grey heads. Instead of women growing old gracefully, they are staying young beautifully. They have attained the spirit and joy in the game of living instead of becoming passively submissive to the marks of Old Father Time.

And what is the underlying cause of all this perpetual youth in the modern woman? I can tell you in a few short sentences by saying that women of the present generation are appreciating more keenly each day the fact that to retain the appearance and feeling of youth and good health, they must keep their bodies fit. In other words, they must live intelligently.

They are realizing that their bodies are theirs to do with what they will, and that they can make them assume exactly the proportions they want them to assume. In other words, they are becoming aware of the fact that their physical appearance is but a reflection, either flattering or detrimental, of their will power and personality, because it is within their province to keep their bodies exactly as they want them. Every woman is mistress of the situation, and if she does the things she should, she can control her weight within an ounce of what it should be.

In other words, if she wills it strongly enough, she can have just the sort of a body she wants to have. There is a day coming, and to my mind it is not very far off, when women will be just as ashamed of being fat and unshapely as they are now of bad grooming. Eating the right kind of food, the proper proportions, and seeing that one's elimination is regular so that the sewerage of the system is unimpeded and the body kept like a flowing stream, is really the foundation for the youthfulness of the modern woman from sixteen to sixty.

SIGNIFICANT SAYINGS
OF THE DAY

"Work will not kill anybody."

You often hear a parent say, "I don't want my children to work the way I had to work." What they really mean is they don't want them to do that kind of work, not that they want them to do less. A successful man or woman is one who is doing the thing he or she wants to and is getting paid for it."—Willard E. Givens.

"A criminal is preferable to the woman who takes money from a man and gives him nothing. The criminal usually robs without the intention of killing, while a woman seeking separate maintenance plans to put a chain around a man's neck and keep tugging at it."—Matilda Fenberg.

"As a matter of fact, there is hardly one person in a thousand whose opinion is worth a hill of beans on any subject other than that of which he has made a special study. So when one steps out of his own sphere to sit in judgment on institutions that he does not understand, the chances are about a thousand to one that he will make another contribution to the yellow publicity he may affect to despise."—Edward McKernon.

"There is real danger of the world being over-populated, but we want birth control to be associated not with the limitation so much as the improvement of families. The larger the family the larger proportion of death in childbirth. The slavery under which some working women live is appalling."—Mrs. Spring Rice.

"Somewhere in human nature there is still a structural weakness. We do not do as well as we know. We make many constitutions, we enact many laws, but they do not come into full observance and effect."—Calvin Coolidge.

KING BEN TOLD HOW TO BEAT DRAFT LAW

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., May 30.—"King" Benjamin Ewell, issued instructions to his followers to beat the draft and engineered a scheme to defraud the government during the World War, Mrs. Esther Johnson Hannaford Hansel, former private secretary to the House of David leader testified today at the state's dissolution suit.

Mrs. Hansel told how, armed with conscientious objection articles written by Ewell, she went before the war board and asked the military authorities to exempt Ewell's bewhiskered cohorts at Camp Custer.

Recovering the bill she jammed it back into her funny little purse, rushed into her headquarters and there held communion with a young man named Owney Madden, or some such sporting column monger.

Tex's claim was that she had the "sucker" concession on Mazda Lane and wasn't going to stand for no false alarm peddling and an an-ancestrally-disturbed faking blind man cuttin' in on her legitimate graft.

"Here I been supportin' that Human Error in the Fourth Dimension," wailed Miss Guinan, "an' he's been givin' me the merry ha-ha, the soft snicker and the recherche rawberry."

Mr. Owney Madden is listed on the personnel of the Guinan pay roll. He is a broad grin with an iron jaw, a pair of hairy, healthy fists and a look of settled melancholy.

He stepped out, grabbed Rollo by the collar, coaxed him into a corner and whispered a few words intended only for Rollo's ears. And Rollo is now among the missing, when the white lights begin to blaze at eventide along Nedick Highway and Broadway starts anew its nightly slide toward hell.

MAKING MODERN MENUS

Mrs. Jones—"I was just looking at your garden. My! how your beans are growing!" Mrs. Brown—"They can't grow too fast to suit me. We are so fond of lima beans. By the way, I must give you new recipes I have for cooking lima beans."

LIMA BEANS WITH BACON
Two cups cooked lima beans, four to six slices bacon, three or four eggs, one-half cup milk, salt and pepper.

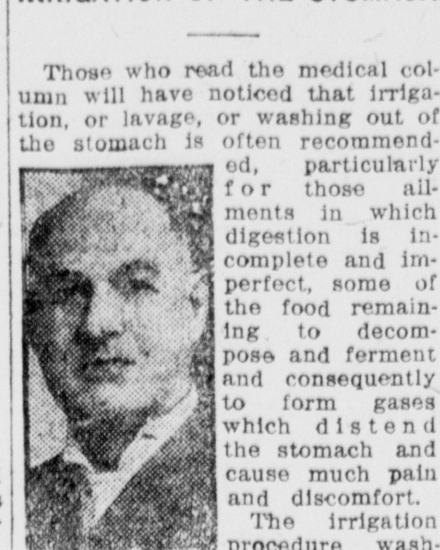

Fry the bacon a delicate brown. Remove strips and cut in small pieces. Beat eggs slightly, add milk, beans, bacon and seasoning. Cook in bacon fat, stirring constantly until set.

LIMA BEANS WITH CHEESE
One pound cheese, two cups cooked lima beans, 1 chopped green pepper, salt, pepper, paprika.

Cut the cheese in pieces and melt in a double boiler, seasoning to taste. When melted add the hot beans and serve on toast.

Keeping HEALTHY by Dr. A. F. Currier

IRRIGATION OF THE STOMACH

Those who read the medical column will have noticed that irrigation, or lavage, or washing out of the stomach is often recommended for those ailments in which digestion is incomplete and imperfect, some of the food remaining to decompose and ferment and consequently to form gases which distend the stomach and cause much pain and discomfort.

The irrigation procedure washes out all this offensive material and with it, as a rule, a lot of mucus which has formed and accumulated in the stomach, and gives the organ a new start.

Of course the procedure must be repeated every day or two and it may be for weeks or months, but I know of no simple operation which gives greater relief in a very short time.

It looks rather formidable, and particularly to those who have a sensitive throat, which is easily provoked and excited, but I believe there are few who cannot adjust themselves to this irritation if they can only arouse sufficient will power to meet the discomfort for the first few operations, and will look steadily forward to the prospect of being relieved of their stomach ailment.

It is recommended by some writers that the mucous membrane of the mouth and throat be sprayed with a solution of cocaine if the mucous membrane is unusually sensitive and rebellious, but in the days of my active practice I never found it necessary to resort to this precaution.

The apparatus is a long, soft rubber tube, conical and closed at its anterior end and with one or two eyes or slits at the sides through which the contents of the stomach pass out.

Into the posterior or upper end of the tube is fitted a glass funnel which may hold half a pint to a pint. The rubber tube is one-half inch in diameter. You often hear about stomach pumps being used to empty the stomach.

If there are real pumps for this purpose, I have never seen them, and according to my experience the rubber tube "fills the bill" entirely. As an irrigating fluid I have never used anything but plain water, warm and clean. It may sometimes be desirable to use the water quite hot, say 100 degrees Fahrenheit, but it must never be too hot, for in the first place it would injure the stomach, and in the second place it would coagulate its contents and prevent their passage through the opening in the tube.

In some cases a weak solution of alkaline mineral salt may be used, bicarbonate of soda or common salt or Carlsbad salt, instead of plain warm salt water, but the latter has always seemed adequate to me.

Not much more than a pint need be used for each irrigation. The patient is protected with a large towel and upon his knees he holds a basin with his two hands.

It may be handy during the insertion of the tube to receive saliva and vomited material, though it will be by no means necessary in all cases.

Of course if there are any false teeth or other impediments in the mouth they must be removed.

The patient sits in a chair with head forward, and the tube covered at its end with oil, glycerine or vasoline is passed gently along the roof of the mouth into the throat. Gargling will probably come at this point, but it must be resisted by will power and effort made to swallow the tube.

When it passes into the esophagus or gullet, it is beyond the grip of the swallowing muscles and from this location will slide easily down into the stomach.

Then the glass funnel is fitted into the end of the tube, raised to a vertical position and the water poured into the funnel. Then the patient bends slightly forward, the funnel is reversed and by siphon action the contents of the stomach will flow out.

The procedure should then be repeated, perhaps several times, until the fluid returns clear.

Repeating this performance according to the urgency of the conditions, the stomach will soon become decent and wholesome, like a boy with dirty hands and face who has been scrubbed under the pump, and very often the bad symptoms will disappear.

It is not difficult for anybody with ordinary will power and perseverance to learn how to introduce a tube into his stomach.

Of course it will be necessary to have an assistant to introduce the irrigating fluid and to manage the siphoning.

If more people practiced irrigation and siphoning of the stomach there would be fewer cases of indigestion and dyspepsia.

Ask Dr. Currier that medical question that has been puzzling you. Confine your letter to fifty words and send stamped, addressed envelope for reply. He cannot, of course, make individual diagnoses, and he reserves the right to decide as to the propriety of queries.

The Theatre

Another reason for the withdrawal of "Rio Rita" the Ziegfeld extravaganza, from Broadway, as reported last week in this column, is given in the allegation that Florenz Ziegfeld revue producer, is without means to meet obligations, made in an affidavit filed in Supreme Court, White Plains, N. Y., Friday by Edward Royce, stage director. He filed the affidavit in conjunction with his suit to collect on 1 per cent of the gross receipts of "Rio Rita," Ziegfeld's latest revue.

The affidavit also alleged that Ziegfeld for two years has failed to meet notes, and that the producer lost $100,000 in a poker game in Florida last year. Royce asked the court to appoint a receiver to insure that he be paid his percentage.

Royce avowed that Ziegfeld owed more than $200,000, owns no realty, has no tangible assets and that suits aggregating $50,000 against him are pending. Ziegfeld denied Royce's allegations and asked Supreme Court Justice Seeger to preclude the affidavit on the ground that it contains "scandalous, scandalous, libelous and grossly untrue falsehoods." Decision was reserved.

"I shall not continue much longer with my acting. I shall be very domestic and perhaps raise a large family." So said Pola Negri.

Colleen Moore, wife of John McCormack, who resigned last week as general manager for production for First National Pictures, Inc., walked out of her last picture, "When Irish Eyes are Smiling," soon after her husband left. She declined to say whether she will appear in the leading roles for three other pictures for which she is now under contract to First National.

Reserves Whitewash Osborn Cement Team 16 To 0

PAYTON BLANKS Foe ALLOWING BUT FIVE HITS IN AFTERNOON

Regan Pitches Well But Quits When Mates Betray Him

All teams look alike to the Xenia Reserves, the local nine running its winning streak to five straight by overwhelming the Osborn Miami Cements for the second time this season 16 to 0 in a slow Buckeye League set to Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

"Rube" Payton pitched his second shut-out in two weeks, permitting but five hits and demonstrating particular effectiveness with runners on bases to overcome an unusual tendency to wildness.

Reserves accumulated all of their runs in three innings, scoring twice in the sixth, eight in the seventh, and with game safely stowed away, came back to score six more times in the eighth.

Lee Regan, Xenia boy, on the hill for Osborn, pitched effectively for six innings, blanking the Reserves in the first five frames but voluntarily removed himself from the game in the seventh after three Osborn errors had resulted in two more runs.

Wilkinson, a youngster with nothing more than his nerve, took his place, and hits rattled off Reserve bats with monotonous regularity, the home team punching out no less than thirteen hits off his delivery in the two innings he worked.

The game was a fairly good exhibition for six innings until Osborn blew up.

Payton worked himself out of at least three tight situations with great skill. Twice the Cements filled the bases and on another occasion had runners on first and second but could not score, and nine runners were left stranded on the bags.

Every member of the winning team hit safely at least once and each player also scored at least one run himself. Reserves amassed nineteen hits. Keifer leading with the willow with four hits including two doubles, in five swings. C. Scott obtained three hits and Durnbaugh, Tangeman, Cyphers, Rader and Payton each obtained two bingles. Carr was the only Osborn player to make two hits.

With the exception of an error by Rader, the Reserves fielded faultlessly and completed one double play. Osborn committed seven misplays behind the effective pitching of Regan, who should have been scored upon during his stay in the box.

Reserves will probably have some opposition at last in the Memorial Day game with the Springfield Tramps, who will include four or five Central League players in their lineup. Cyphers will pitch the game with Hood working for the visitors. Reserves defeated the Tramps last year 3 to 2.

XENIA QUIT CLUB TO MEET EASTWOOD

Xenia Quoit Club will be trying for its first match victory of the season in the Miami Valley Quoit League match with the Eastwood Club on the Dayton courts Tuesday night.

Arrangements will also probably be made this week to play the postponed match with the Shrine Club of Dayton. Rain forced cancellation of the match in Xenia last Monday night.

All pitchers of the local club should report at the club grounds on E. Market St. at 7 o'clock, promptly, prior to leaving for Dayton.

POLICE AND XENIA RESERVES LEADING BUCKEYE LEAGUE

Dayton Police and Xenia Reserves preserved their records in the Buckeye League free from defeats by winning league games Sunday.

Reserves again proved too much for the Osborn Miami Cements and Payton shut out the visitors 16 to 0, Osborn going to pieces defensively in the seventh inning.

The Police had no end of trouble in defeating Harshmanville on the latter's diamond, by a score of 3 to 2. "Lefty" Leeper pitched for the winners and worked himself out of many desperate situations, holding the losers to four hits. Long hurled a nice game for Harshman.

Imagine a baseball team with a batting average of .388. This happens to be the team average of the Xenia Reserves for the five games played this season. The local nine is averaging eleven runs and thirteen hits per contest.

Durnbaugh continues to lead the heavy hitters with an average of .619, obtaining two hits in the Osborn massacre Sunday afternoon. Reserves have a fielding average of .956 averaging about two misplays in the field per game. Here is how the players are hitting:

ANTIOCH HITS BEHIND SMART PITCHING TO BEAT CEDARVILLE

Long distance clouting of the winners featured the 12 to 5 victory of Antioch College over the Cedarville College Yellow Jackets in a loosely played game Saturday afternoon at Yellow Springs.

Nagley, in the box for Cedarville, was far less effective than usual, and was touched for twelve hits. Antioch scored enough runs to win in the opening two innings, tallying four times in the first and twice in the second. Three runs were added in the fourth, two in the sixth and another in the seventh for good measure.

The fielding of each team was ragged to say the least, both nines

HOG RATIONS WILL BE DEMONSTRATED LIVESTOCK DAYS

"How can the rations for hogs be improved?" is the subject of the swine experiments now nearing completion and which will be demonstrated for the hog producers of Ohio in a series of Livestock Days arranged by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station and the Agricultural Extension Service of the Ohio State University.

The first of the series of demonstrations will be held at the Experiment Station at Wooster on May 27. The livestock will then be moved by special arrangement to Fostoria for exhibition at the stock yards there on May 31, then to Bellefontaine on June 2, and finally to Circleville on June 4, where on the afternoon of that day all stock in the demonstrations will be sold at public auction.

The swine experiments will consist of eighteen lots of eight hogs each. These are divided into two general groups, namely, oats in various combinations in comparison with corn in similar combinations, and the improvement of a ration of corn and tankage for fall pigs by the addition of such feeds as linseed meal, alfalfa meal, coconut meal, soybean oil meal, cottonseed meal or cod-liver oil.

In addition to the swine experiments, there will be eight lots of cattle and four of lambs. The results of all lots will be explained by the men in charge of the work at the Experiment Station. A worthwhile program in addition to the experimental livestock is being arranged at each stop.

TWO IN HOSPITAL AFTER ACCIDENTS

John Sowers, 35, Columbus, and James Puckett, 48, Fairfield, both employees of the Southwestern Portland Cement Co. plant at Osborn, are in Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, in a critical condition, suffering from injuries sustained at the plant Thursday and Friday, respectively.

"No-accident week" is to be observed at the plant this week.

Sowers' right shoulder was burned to a crisp when he came in contact with high tension wires while installing a transformer on a pole outside the plant. He is the company electrician.

Puckett, a carpenter, received a fractured skull when he fell twenty-five feet from a scaffold while assisting in the construction of a new building.

control measures for four years.

Another family on the car does not boast about where they are raised because they are much older and much less attractive in appearance. They have been handicapped by round worms.

The sand on which they are sleeping during their excursion is so much preferable to the dirt and filth to which they have been accustomed that they hope their health and appearance will rapidly improve.

The third compartment is occupied by a mother and family of just a few weeks. These pigs will show the effects of the lung stage of the round worm.

In addition to the private car on which the pigs will ride there will be a demonstration car filled with other exhibits and a lecture car, according to O. K. Quivey, General Agricultural Agent for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, who will be in charge of the train.

In the exhibit car will be shown all stages of the common round worm from the egg through the lung stage to the adult form which is found in the intestines. Microscopes will be used to show the larvae which are too small to be visible to the eye.

Lungs from infested pigs will be exhibited to show the injury done by the larva during the two weeks they spend in lung tissue.

Simple measures which control these parasites will be explained in this car. These practices if followed will control some diseases and most other internal parasites.

Bowls of feeds will be displayed in order to teach farmers the best sources of protein to use in addition to corn. The Ohio Experiment Station recommends this mixture after conducting several trials. Mineral mixtures are also shown and recommended under certain conditions by the Experiment Station.

Mr. Quivey has followed the results of worm control demonstrations conducted by the university in various counties in Ohio and other states. The success of these demonstrations has been responsible for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad running a special train to spread these practices among the farmers of southwestern Ohio so that their hog production may become more profitable. The train will be in Jamestown the forenoon of June 11.

THE OLD HOME TOWN

DR. KELSEY TELLS OF VISIT TO ABYSSINIA AND ROYAL FAMILY

Dr. H. A. Kelsey, vice president of Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio, left New York, March 7 for a visit to the far east, and included in his itinerary was a trip to the one independent monarchy of the east—Abyssinia, where he went at the invitation of His Highness, Tafari Makonnen, the reigning prince of Ethiopia. A recent letter to America indicates that this college professor has had a most delightful and enlightening visit with this king and his people. Abyssinia was one of the most inaccessible places in the world until intrepid French engineers built a railway from Djibouti, the seaport of French Somaliland, to Addis Ababa, the capital of Abyssinia. Few outsiders found their way into this land of Bible antiquity, but now adventurers, prospectors and curiosity seekers are getting in in large numbers, sometimes to the annoyance and discomfort of the quiet complacent Ethiopian who does not understand just why he should be thus disturbed.

But this land of Sheba's Queen is rubbing its eyes and yawning with a very real awakening. Her present monarch is a progressive with a capital "P" and the sleep of the centuries since Solomon entertained and crowned her ruler of ancient times is about over. New methods in farming, new processes in marketing her hides, new development of her mineral wealth, new highways and schools and sanitary achievements, a new vision of life is springing up under this little man of fearless courage and far seeing eye. He has sent dozens of Abyssinia's choice youth into other lands to gain an education and bring back to him the world's best ideas and they are now beginning to return and in a few years will be his counselors. Muskingum has three of them who are proving the wisdom of King Tafari's plan. Others are in England, France, Italy, India and elsewhere, the largest number being in Victoria College, Alexandria, Egypt. He has also introduced modern farming methods wherever possible, motor cars and trucks are becoming common, especially the American makes, electricity has found its way to cast a new light in a dark land, and embryo attempts at irrigation are being made. Home schools and the beginning of a nation-wide school system most emphatically spell future growth. If prospectors and adventurers, political and commercial, do not too greatly interfere, the world will see what can be done by a patriotic King working out the welfare of his nation.

Dr. Kelsey spent several days at Addis Ababa and a week or more at Dire Dawa and got into touch with Harrar and other points of interest in this interesting kingdom. He also met up with a number of trekking parties who are out on shooting trips or prospecting for mineral pockets. Sir Jeffrey Archer of England, former governor of the Sudan, was just starting out from Howash with the Maha Rajah of India on a bird hunting expedition. They had as their official stenographer, Mr. Earl Rossman, of New York, who only recently returned from a trip to the far north for the Pathe people and is now in East Africa gathering views for the entertainment of Americans by the cinema process. A representative of the Century Co. of New York was also in Addis Ababa gathering material for some new books and magazine articles.

A group of Eastern people were starting on a three months' shooting trip into the interior. They expect to return to America with some very rare specimens this summer. Abyssinia is the world's mecca for game hunters and ornithologists.

The American Mission Hospital was erected through the generosity of W. S. George, of East Palestine, Ohio, and under the direction of Dr. Thomas A. Lambie, who is now on a furlough in America. This is a prosperous institution in not only healing the sick, but and doing an unmeasured service setting up a standard of sanitation and health which is needed beyond all things else, perhaps, in this disease infected land. Drs. W. A. Pollock of Pennsylvania, and H. L. Finley recently of Egypt, but for some years a resident of New Concord, Ohio, are carrying on this enterprise, and inspiring other agencies to undertake similar tasks.

One of the interesting features of Dr. Kelsey's visit was a dinner party given by His Highness, Tafari Makonnen, and his wife, the Princess at the royal palace April 12. The guests included four or five other Americans of Addis Ababa, the members of the British and French legations and a few prominent Abyssinians. It was a six course affair served in modern style, and most graciously done. Following the dinner a movie showing the changes that are being brought about in Abyssinia's life, especially her industrial efforts, was put on for the guests. This royal pair proved themselves very apt in entertaining guests and in helping the various groups invited to enjoy the social hour. They had many questions about the boys in school at Muskingum and about America in general and seemed very kindly disposed toward our nation and eager to know more about its life.

Dr. Kelsey is extending his visit to Egypt and Palestine and with his daughter, Miss Elizabeth Kelsey, who has been teaching in Alexandria, will visit points of interest in Europe before his return to America in July.

BRINGING UP FATHER

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

The Rovin' Ritzies

By Flo Frederick

The crowd is mighty gay
On this merry circus day!

"Right this way to see the magic-eating Congo man," called Rag, the black-robed magician to the neighborhood kids who were giving their clown-spot tickets to Betty Ann, the gatekeeper and passing on down the roped-in path past the wild caged animals of the famous Ritz side show.

"Right this way—" Rag's side-show barking was suddenly cut short as something unexpected happened down the roped-in path. So far everything had gone fine. In spite of all the details that had to be tended to, the Ritzies had managed to have their circus in readiness at the appointed hour and the invited neighbors had arrived on time, carrying balloons and blowing horns. They seemed to be in gay and happy mood, which was a good sign that they would be an appreciative audience.

To have something go wrong now would certainly be the worst of luck. The crowd gathered thick around the African man-eating tiger's cage and Rag thought gloomily to himself that they were all poking fun at the Ritzies for having tried to make Betty's pet cat look like a tiger.

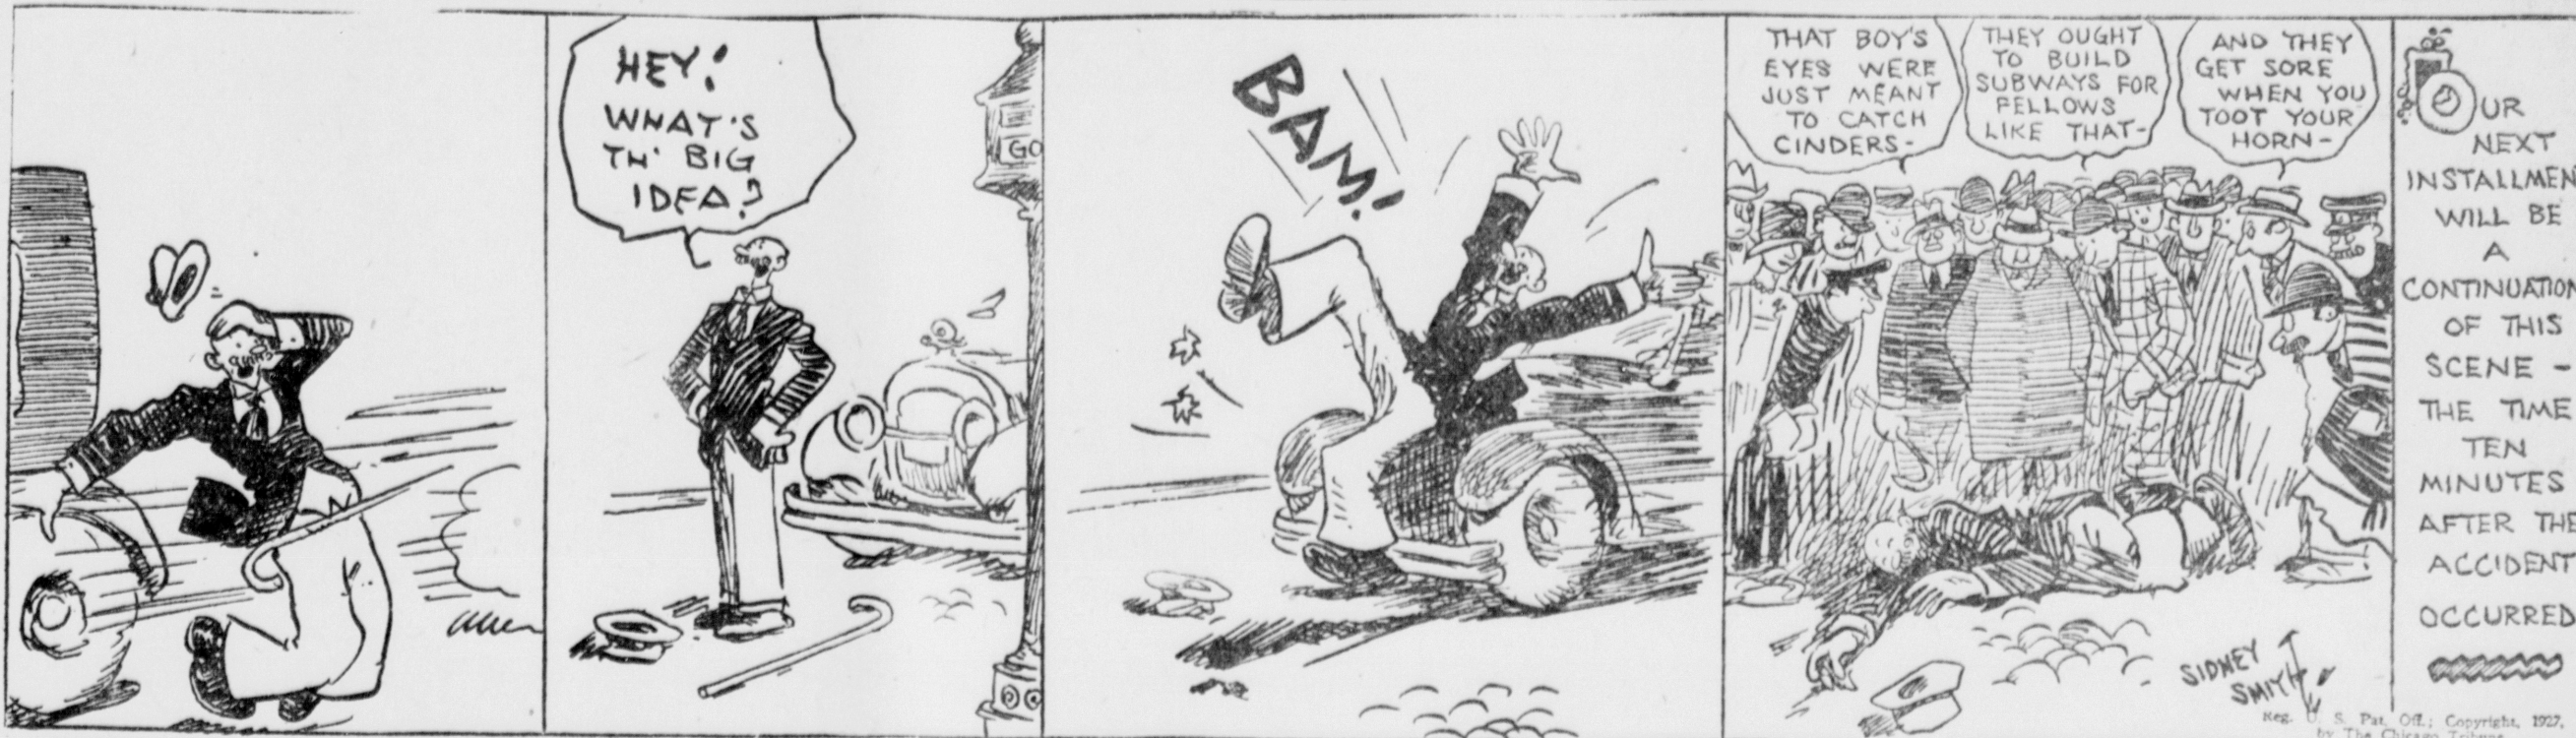

Not daring to join the crowd in his magician's robe, he climbed on the kids were used to seeing. Most important of all, how could they be expected to know that a stray dog had made a pass at Spotty's cage just before the arrival of the guests and that the enraged cat was clawing at her cage in an effort to get at him.

At any rate she had so awed the audience of boys and girls that they were ready to believe anything—even that Rag was a true magician and that the savage-looking Tag was a real Congo man. When he calmly blew out the flame to his candle and devoured it whole they thought the little darkened carpenter shop was filled with magic and were glad to get into the big circus ring.

There, they found seats, as the Ritzies had placed boxes all around the roped-in area and waited breathlessly to see what would happen next.

The floor of the ring had been covered with wood shavings and sawdust and in the center stood Marty, dressed as the master of ceremonies in his high-top boots, black felt hat, flowing sash and cracking whip. He took charge of the acts in the big ring with a flourish that thrilled his audience. The fact that Tricky, the Ritzie mascot, forgot a trick or two, that Patsy, in her tinsel-trimmed dance

WILE SAYS:

To this writer: "There is sure to be a big row over the shake-up in the farm loan board, though it will not reach its peak until next winter when congress meets. It is my private opinion that unless the reorganization is publicly satisfactory to farmers, it will be a threat to the administration and the Republican party almost, if not quite, as serious as the veto of the McNary-Haugen bill. Farmers were divided on the latter controversy, but they will be found practically unanimous in condemning changes in the vast agricultural credits organization, unless these can be justified to the farming world."

The administration's attitude toward these "warnings" and toward the accusations that cause them is that President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon deemed the time had come to put rigid business efficiency into the federal farm loan system. This is now a concern with an annual turnover of roundly $2,000,000,000. Although nominally "farmers-owned" to a large extent as far as the joint-stock land banks and other rural institutions for farm credits are concerned, supervisory responsibility for them is vested in the federal government. . . . For some time the treasury department has felt that the management of the federal farm loan board, which is in general control of the whole scheme, was not being conducted on the best possible lines. In particular, treasury officials were of opinion that methods of examination of farm banks were not as thorough-going as they should be. It was considered that in many directions there was lack of system and sound grasp on the far-flung farm credits scheme.

Strong representations were made at the White House by farm forces against the reorganization which has in the meantime taken place. Agricultural organizations and their leaders feel a jealous pride and sense of proprietorship in the land bank system, and they bitterly oppose any movement the result of which is to remove the land banks further away from control by farm representatives. Messrs. Meyer, Harrison and Cooksey are under fire as being typically representative of "Wall Street," rather than of "dirt farmers," in whose interest the federal farm loan board acts.

Some agricultural authorities express the opinion that a combined Republican-Progressive-Democratic opposition in the seventeenth congress will easily be able to frustrate confirmation of the reorganiza-

ed farm loan board. The opposition, it is predicted, practically assures congressional investigation of the whole farm loan system. One of those who is fomenting the movement in that direction asserts that the investigation will naturally "turn the light upon the interest of certain persons in having the system brought under the domination of the treasury department."

The same authority claims that such an investigation was held in check last winter only by the efforts of former friends of the farm loan system, who feared a possible reaction on farm loan and bond sales. These friends are said now to feel that the time for hesitation is past. With nearly 500,000 farmer-stockholders owing the entire federal land bank system, and chaffing because they claim they are now excluded from any effective voice in its management, the political barometer seems set for stormy weather on Capitol Hill next year. The effect upon the 1928 presidential campaign, it is obvious, might be considerable.

Farm leaders declare Messrs. Jones, Cooper and Landes were ousted from the farm loan board because of their opposition to a treasury proposal which would have required farm loan banks to foreclose on any farm borrower more than ninety days delinquent in interest.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:
The entrance of America into the World War finds Phillip Wynne Tracy IV suffering from the collapse of his first passionate love affair. Before this he and Natalie Jones, who is the daughter of the Tracy's millman, had had a childish engagement which, however, had been objected to by both Mr. Jones and Mrs. Tracy.
Phillip becomes interested in Lyra Hillard, an old friend of his mother's. He takes her to luncheon and shortly finds he is falling in love. The whole affair, however, sinks into nothingness because war is declared, and after writing a cruel letter to Phillip, Lyra leaves without seeing him or his mother.
Rod and Phil are the first to enlist. Rod and Phillip start for the barracks. Natalie goes to the wrong depot to see them off, and in her anxiety to see Phil she ignores Rod's entreaty. This sorry episode breaks his heart.
Phillip writes his mother and asks her to be good to him.
Phillip finds he must leave for the southern training camp before seeing his mother again.
For the story further unfold—

He went in and shut the door.

will not have time to think.

"By the way, I have just remembered that an old school friend of mine married a man by the name of 'Tennis' and went to El Paso to live. Marto Tennis had a daughter whom she named after herself and who must be about your age."

"I am enclosing a note for Marto. I know she will be nice to you, not only for my sake, but for your own. 'Dear Boy, I am the saddest and happiest woman in the world—the saddest because you, my son, are facing—I know not what—and happiest because Major Aukland has made it possible for me to work so hard that there will be occasionally, here and there, a moment when I shall forget."

"I love you, dear, and am lost without you. I am always asking myself why I let you go."

As though he could not understand it all, Phillip folded the letter carefully and looked up at the sky. It was a dome of brass that reflected the hot and uncomfortable sand.

His mother!

Was it possible that his mother had written him the letter he had just read?

Was it possible that his mother could write him a letter at all, most wholly about herself and her own affairs? It seemed to Phillip Tracy as though his new strange world that he had just entered was about to tumble about his head.

He could not conceive that his mother could have any interest in life that did not concern him personally and individually.

The idea of her giving up the old home and going to Washington until the end of the war was unthinkable. He racked his brain to place this Major Aukland, of whom her letter was so full. He could not remember him.

Of course, he was some man who wanted to get his clutches on his mother's money. She ought to realize that she was too old to feel his face grow hot as he felt his face grow hot. His common sense whispered that he who had been bowled over by Lyra Hillard—a woman nearly the age of his mother—might not be considered capable of judging how old a woman must be before she would cease to attract some man.

The more he thought of it, however, the more hurt and angry he got.

His mother should have stayed where he left her. After all, he was the head of his father's house. He could not picture her established in Washington.

He was cut adrift. He seemed to have lost everything that he had ever felt was his own. First, because of a moment's madness, Natalie had told him she would never marry him. Then, because he thought he must be patriotic and follow in his father's footsteps, he had joined up for this silly old war, which up to date had had neither thrills nor glory, consisting, as it did, of bad food, hard work and continually being sworn at by ignorant "non-coms and shave-tails."

AND Lyra Hillard—why had she picked on him? Could no woman resist a little attention from a man, young or old? Phil shook himself as though to get away from all these unpleasant thoughts. He was also a little ashamed to have put his mother in the same category with Lyra Hillard.

He even smiled a little as he saw Rod coming from the company tailor with the two bars on his sleeve which had been given him that morning. But his pride in Rod's being made a corporal held a sting, as he knew that in the nature of things it would spoil some of their intimate friendship. Nevertheless, he snapped into a salute and asked: "What are you going to do tonight, Corporal? I'd like to celebrate with you."

"Sorry, Wynne, I will be on duty tonight and passed on."

That evening Phil, who had been getting more and more discontented for Rod had been very busy all day, wandered into town and ordered a room at the hotel, revelled in a very hot bath, dressed and brushed his clothes, shoes and hair with the same scrupulous precision, and went down to dinner.

As he was shown to his table, he passed Lieutenant Andrews and one of the prettiest girls he ever saw. He found himself nearly opposite his commanding officer, but that did not keep him from smiling at the girl.

She, having no reverence for the red tape of the army, and noting that the private was handsome and the officer she was with, returned his smiles with interest. The two managed to work up a gay little flirtation before Phil finished his dinner.

Hastily taking out his mother's letter of introduction to her mother, he wrote on the back of it: "May I call soon?"

Then he very ostentatiously called a waiter and stood at the dining room door until he caught her nod of permission, and incidentally the raging fury of the lieutenant.

As he left the dining room he realized that he was lonely. He cursed the lieutenant. He missed Rod. He walked out aimlessly, until all at once he became aware that he was in a narrow street filled entirely with men.

Each side of this street was lined with what seemed to be a great high wall pierced alternately with a window and a door—a window and a door.

When these doors were open and curtains were up, one could catch a glimpse through them of a bed, a chair, a chest of drawers and a half-open bathroom, while almost always a woman stood at the doorway with beckoning smiles.

With a distasteful shrug of the shoulders, Phil passed on until he was stopped by the sound of a rattling cough. He raised his eyes to the face of a frail girl, very young and evidently very sick and miserable.

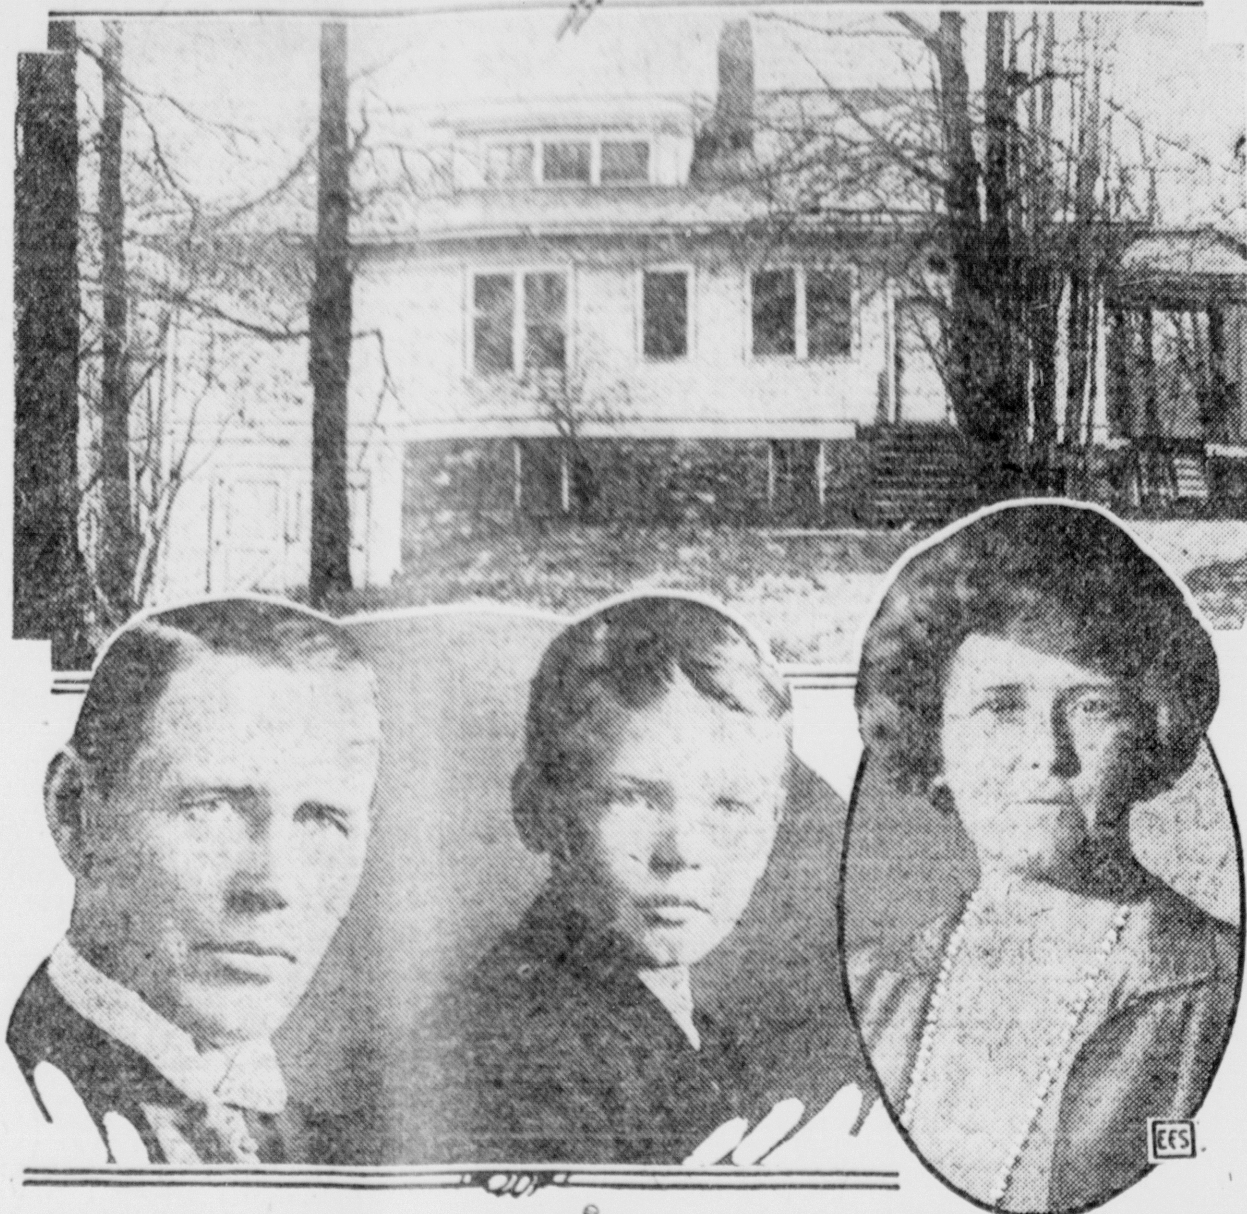

Her eyes challenged him with her unhappiness.

He stared at her for a moment, and then brushing her inside, he went in and shut the door.

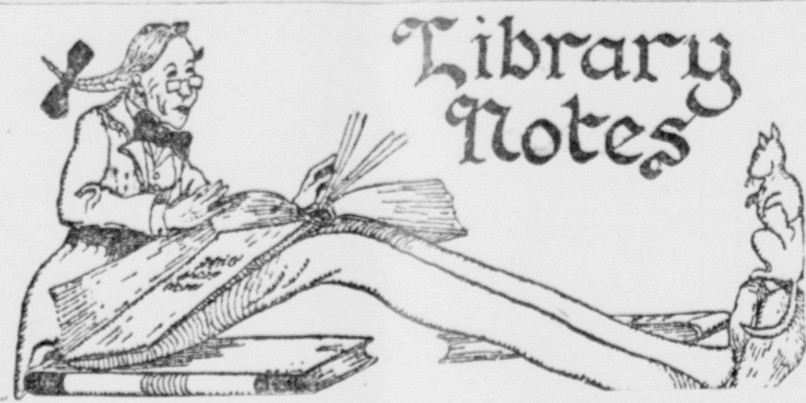

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Phil seems to possess an attraction to all women. His adventure with this girl and meeting Marto Tennis are told in the next installment.

WHEN CHARLES LINDBERGH WAS A LITTLE BOY

This cosy house on the outskirts of Little Falls, Minn., was the boyhood home of Charles Lindbergh, now the whole world's pet. The pictures below show the flyer as a youngster, with his father, former congressman, now dead, and the most recent portrait of Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, his mother.

"ANGEL" HEYWARD

Less than a year ago DuBose Heyward was almost unknown to Northern readers, although Southerners have been watching his rapid rise as a poet with much interest. Last year he published his first novel "Porgy," which painted as true a picture of the Negro of the seacoast as Joel Chandler Harris gave us of the inland dandy. Because the dialect was so different from that of the inland Negro, many Northerners did not care for "Porgy."

Now once again Heyward is plotting the life of the south as he knows it. This time it is the people of his own native mountains that he chooses to portray. The plot is in no way unusual but the author develops it with a surety of touch and an understanding of what the approach of the lowland civilization is doing to the mountaineer that makes of this book one way above the average.

The story has to do with Angel Thornley and Buck Merritt primarily, and their struggle to get more from life than the rest of their acquaintances. Angel, the daughter of a zealous, narrow minded mountain preacher, falls in love with Buck Merritt. For generations Merritt's people have been making whiskey and Buck sees no reason why he should be the one to stop. That Angel's father will never permit her to marry a whiskey man is realized by both but does not prevent their love from blossoming and bearing fruit.

Unfortunately Angel's father learns of their love and to separate the two informs on Buck. In the attempt to capture the boy one of the revenue men is wounded and at a trial the judge gives

Rheumatism can't be rubbed away

Are you one of those unfortunate who suffer with pains in your muscles and joints, making you miserable, less efficient, interfering with your working hours, ruining your sleep?

You may have tried many things without relief. Why not try S.S.S.?

For more than 100 years it has been giving relief in thousands of cases, as testified to in unsolicited letters of gratitude.

"I suffered from rheumatism for a good many years. At times my joints would swell so, I couldn't walk. I tried most everything. Went to Hot Springs and finally I decided to try S.S.S. I took a course in a short time the rheumatic pains entirely left me. I also had a breaking out on my hands for years that nothing would heal, but now this has disappeared, and I am sure that it was S.S.S. which removed the cause. I am now in perfect health, and want to add that I have tried all kinds of medicines but I think S.S.S. is the best." Carl C. Campbell, 115 West Main Street, Johnson City, Tenn.

S.S.S. is purely vegetable. It is extracted from the fresh roots of medicinal plants and has and gives to Nature what she needs in building you up so that your system throws off the cause.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.
